Businessmen plead case against budget

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Meeting with the county's management committee was just "one step in 100" for the two local businessmen who are urging county politicians to practice more fiscal restraint.

"It was pretty reasonable," Gary Kenney says of Wednesday's meeting. He and John Beachli had asked to speak before the entire county council, but Warden Carol Puffer said they'd have to speak at the management committee meeting, which is closed to the public.

"We still believe it has to be a debate carried out in public," Kenney says, adding they've been successful in getting an invitation to the next county council meeting. In a letter read to the committee, the businessmen say "Taxpayers should not have to talk with committees in private about their concerns. Our concerns are voiced in the street, at the post office, over the supper table, and at hockey games. If you are not aware of those concerns... you have a need to be told about them publicly and as a whole council."

The county's recent budget calls for a 35.7 per cent increase in spending. The businessmen, who are garnering widespread support through an ad campaign and are not planning to run in November's elections, say that's not acceptable. (After previously voting not to open the budget, county councillors now say it's too late to make changes.)

"Annual increases in taxes at only the rate of inflation will still see doubling of that burden in 12 to 15 years," says Kenney and Beachli's letter. "Increases at the levels of recent years will see doubling in every five to eight years. Increases in private income does not match the latter."

"Spend according to the income we have. It is a simple concept every family in this community has to live with."

If the county is blaming mandated programs and services from the provincial government, then people would be willing to help pressure the government to reduce the strain, the men say. "Provincial/federal policies that encourage higher levels of spending before grants or cost-sharing are provided are no bargain if the taxpayer must dig deeper in the pocket. . . Increases due to provincial/federal pressures require taxpayer support to resist. It is too late to advise your neighbours 30 days after the budget is passed that you had no control over 25 per cent of the increase."

"Expectations are no substitute for priorities. There is no family in this community that does not recognize the need to plan according to what they can afford rather than what they wish they could have."

Kenney and Beachli recognize that funding mechanisms encourage over spending: you don't receive money until you spend some. For instance, although the county's roads budget went up 10 per cent, the county did cut back

Over-fishing prompts more shoreline rules on Kennesis Lakes

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Over-fishing — not environmental factors such as acid rain — was responsible for the lake trout decline in Kennesis Lake, a Ministry of Natural Resources biologist said as he explained the new emphasis on habitat protection and population assessments.

"There was heavy angling before the early '80s," David McLeish told the 85 members of the Kennesis Lake Cottagers' Association Saturday morning. "It was five times what we predict you can take out of a lake."

"Our lakes here are sensitive. However, I wouldn't say we have any fish populations that are being harmed by acid depositions."

To build up those populations, fish need a place to spawn. But increased development on the lake means fewer spawning grounds, which is why the MNR is becoming very strict about what people can or can't do to their shorelines.

Last year, the Minden office received more than 600 shoreline improvement applications. Because the ministry readily gives its approval for such things as floating docks (they do less harm to a lake bed), only half of the applications required site inspections. Of those, 80 per cent of the plans were modified to protect and enhance the quality of shoreline habitats.

"We're encouraging people to become familiar with the lake before they buy," McLeish said.

If people want a large boat, they shouldn't by a cottage in a shallow bay which would have to be dredged. One man bought land, 150' by 150', covered by water. He wanted to fill it in but the ministry had concerns about protecting the role wetlands serve in lake life.

"Buy what you want; don't buy something and then turn it into what you want," the guest speaker said at the general meeting.

McLeish outlined the history of the lake's fish populations, which survived after a glacier receded 10,000 years ago. A dam was built in 1850, raising the water levels by four metres. This destroyed the natural lake trout population and in 1925 and 1939, the lake was stocked with several thousand fry from Lake Manitou.

"Lake trout are very demanding, slow growing and they don't reproduce quickly. If they don't have the right conditions, they won't survive."

Kennesis Lake's soils are shallow and susceptible to erosion, which caused problems when more people began building four-season cottages and homes. When soil washes into a lake, it causes siltation and fish eggs cannot survive. Some people think retaining walls are the answer, but these sterilizing the shoreline, providing no place for small aquatic life and spawning.

The MNR studied the lake to find spawning areas yet could find none. Yet they were catching fish, so they knew the fish had to be laying.

Flood strands dozens after roads wash out

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

A flood caused by a broken beaver dam tore out part of Sir Sam's Road on Eagle Lake Saturday night, leaving dozens of people stranded, and flooding and damaging a lakeside house.

Robert Bishop, who knows the area well, says the beaver pond was more than a mile away from Eagle Lake, and is the same one that broke 15 years ago. "I saw it then and I saw it 15 years ago and it didn't look any different. It'll probably do the same 15 years from now."

Four roads were washed out by the flood, including Sir Sam's Road, Old Eagle Lake Road, Sir Sam's Village Road, and Chairlift Road.

Overnight a Dysart et al road crew used a backhoe and a truckload of gravel to make Sir Sam's Road passable. After three a.m., by which time the force of water had subsided, they cleared out the culvert, which had become blocked by tree branches, stumps, and rocks.

The washout on Old Eagle Lake Road was much more extensive, and Jim Taylor, Dysart et al's road superintendent, says it will not be repaired until more road workers return from the holiday weekend.

The owners of the flooded house, Krishan and Radha Ahuja, and their neighbors who came to help in the morning are angry with the municipality, which they say did nothing to help them that night or even tell them what had happened.

"I can't believe it. This is ridiculous. They should have at least told them. When they woke up it was a mess," says neighbor John Van Schaik.

But Taylor says it isn't possible to contact everyone affected by something like this. "I don't know where I could find time to do all this . . . How do you notify all these people and their guests?"

He has spoken to Ahuja and says he is now satisfied that Taylor couldn't have done anything more. When the water swept through their yard, the Ahujas thought they were hearing a storm.

But they woke up to devastation. After gouging through Sir Sam's

Dysart will show where its taxes go

by BRIAN RODNICK

Higher taxes are on everybody's mind and to satisfy the public's curiosity, Dysart council will include extra information on its 1991 budget fact sheet published in local newspapers. These will include the phone numbers of the Haliburton County Board of Education and the county office.

"People are very angry and they call our office wanting to know where their money is being spent," said Clerk-administrator Donna

McCallum at last Monday's council meeting.

Dysart pays $792,228 of the county's 1991 budget and $3,740,679 to the board of education, or 35 per cent of the board's budget.

To help the public understand why the levy is this large, Dysart will also include the names and phone numbers of its school trustees.

McCallum suggested that taxes be paid in more than two installments.

"I would be concerned that if we charge them this way, they might look at two bills as an increase," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater. There would also be extra mailing costs. Council will not pursue this at the current time.

Road the torrent washed across the Ahujas' property, ripping away their own road, pouring one-and-a-half feet of water into the house's basement, and turning the hard-packed dirt of the garage floor, underneath boards and carpet, into a swamp.

Mr. Ahuja, who has just been released from three-and-a-half months in hospital for an acute respiratory condition, was initially outraged that no-one came to tell them what had happened.

Mrs. Ahuja says that in the morning when they saw the damage Mr. Ahuja went out with a shovel to try to do something, but his condition has weakened him to the point where he almost collapsed from the effort. "He's frustrated and angry. He usually does all the work around here."

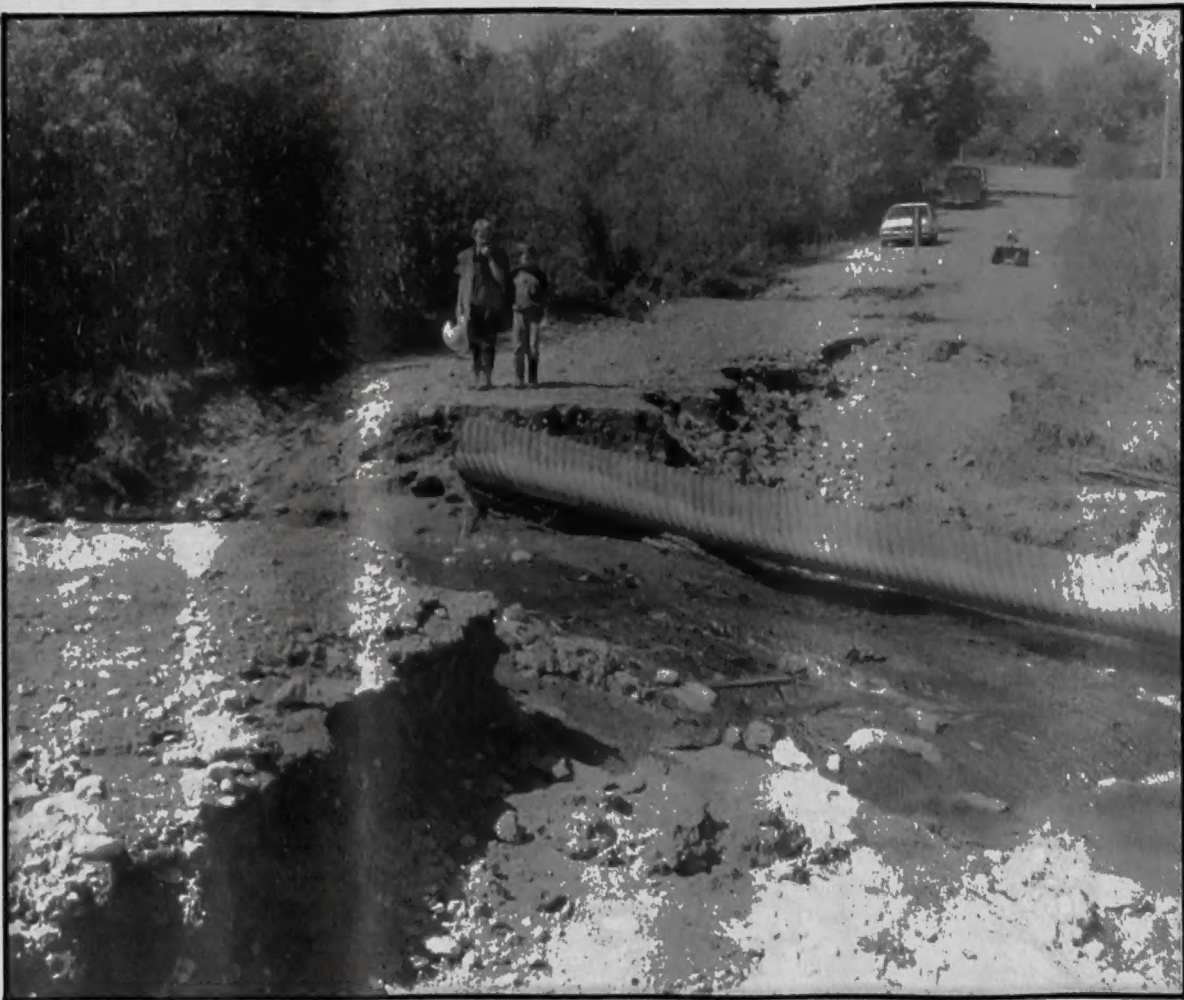

Luckily for the Ahujas their neighbors were willing to lend a hand. Before nine a.m. five or six people were there with shovels and work boots trying to return the house to a semblance of order. One took around a tray of hot coffee while others pulled household items out of the quagmire in the garage, rolled logs off of the yard and surveyed the damage. An independent front-end-loader operator, Ken Evans, was called in to repair the road to the house.

After the flood hit, word spread through Sir Sam's Inn that the road was washed out. The Inn used its pontoon boat to ferry people to the other side of the lake, past the washout, where they could be picked up by friends or family. People had to leave their cars until the morning.

At its height the flood was equivalent in size and strength to a small river, and the roads it crossed had channels at least four-feet deep cut through them. The water dragged the culverts out of the road, and carried logs and trees into the channel.

"Someone tried to walk through it and it was up to here," says honeymooning cottager Shelley Doughty, pointing to her knee. "It was too strong, he had to turn back."

GRAND CANYON OF THE NORTH? Frank and Adam Zieger check out the damage to Sir Sam's Road after water from a broken beaver dam cut its way through it and three other roads on Saturday night. They used to call it their secret river, but now a lot more people know about it. Dysart crews will begin fixing it today.

Mini-golf is almost set to tee-off

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Calling all mini-golfers. Haliburton's first mini-golf course could open shortly, after council reviews the owner's proposal.

George Logan wants to create a mini-golf course near the former veterinary building on Highway 121, east of Haliburton.

The course would cover at least 3000 square feet and have enough parking for 12 cars. If council agrees, Logan said he would like the course open by June 1.

"It would only be opened weekends until at least July," he said, and would be operated during the day.

More reviews for finances

Instead of waiting for the year-end budget talks, county councillors will now be given regular reports of the county's finances.

"Given the circumstances and some of the situations (resulting from the 1991 budget), it is recommended that all county councillors get at least a quarterly statement, a councillor said at Wednesday's meeting.

County's recent budget increase was 35.7 per cent, which surprised some councillors and angered many taxpayers.

Resistance grows to tax hike

on plans, meaning a loss in provincial funding of $1-million. As a result, county councillors said Wednesday, two contract road workers will not be hired back this summer.

"There's no incentive to budget properly," says Kenney.

"I don't think they realized what (the roads cuts) meant to the county," said Don Shortreed, Sherborne et al reeve and chairman of the management committee, at Wednesday's county council meeting. "It's our concern also the senior governments are cutting back on funds we have to collect."

Shortreed said of meeting with

Kenney and Beachli: "We listened to them and their presentation was well-received and there's an understanding that some of their facts were not correct. We tried to assure them that if they had any questions our chief administrative officer will provide them with the answers."

Meanwhile, the businessmen are garnering more support from cottage associations.

"There is a growing resistance to your recent tax hike and a very bitter resentment towards the process you have chosen to take in the 1991 budget, and in reaction to your constituencies' resistance to its contents," says their letter.

Ministry nixes interim plans

The Ministry of Municipal Affairs have quashed the county's plan to establish interim planning documents for the seven municipalities which do not have Official Plans.

"It's not their policy to accept such a document," said county planner Mark Stagg at last Wednesday's county council meeting. He had proposed the draft plans to facilitate development in the seven municipalities as the county's OP (COP) is being drafted. Under a two-tier COP system, all municipalities will have to have their own corresponding OPs.

Stagg was planning to draw from Dysart et al's, Anson, Hindon and Minden's and Cardiff's OPs. Dysart Reeve Bill Davis wondered why the ministry would approve those OPs and yet not approve the interim plans which are based on the OPs.

The ministry "doesn't believe in interim plans," Davis says. Stagg added "they're also concerned that it wouldn't be in spirit and intent of the county Official Plan process." The COP won't be ready for "several years. . . I will keep on preparing the beginning of the OP on a must-do basis."

Meanwhile, Stagg has received a letter from the ministry reminding him he has yet to get motions of support for the OP from each of the county's 10 municipalities. These motions are necessary before the draft terms of references, which have already been submitted, are approved. No funding is available until the terms are approved.

Tracking trout leads to spawning grounds

ing their eggs somewhere. Last fall, Tim Haxton and Kim Hartley used a more innovative approach: on cold and rainy days, they caught 17 large trout, anesthetized them and inserted a transmitter into their belly. Then, when the fish began spawning, they were able track the trout.

"Many fish moved to the south-west end of the lake," McLeish said. "We feel the fish spawned in deep water shoals, perhaps 20-to-30-feet deep, which is not common at all. There's only one other lake in Haliburton County where this is done."

The transmitters will last 14 months so the MNR plans to con-reasons, not economic ones. We will devote more time on spawning beds."

In other business described at the meeting at Haliburton Forest's Boiler Room, Dan Buhl of the Haliburton Forest Owners Association told people how they could protect trees from tent caterpillar infestations. (Poke a hole in the tent and spray a mixture of dish soap and water inside.) People also have to make sure they don't transport Gypsy moths up here on their trailers and cars, since this is a more voracious insect which can do more harm.

Heavy logging in the past damaged some of the lake's forests. (See story by Susan Camp-co-operation from Dysart roads superintendent Jim Taylor. Before their complaints were never heeded and "now we have a fellow who says 'Let's look at it.'"

There's a lack of communication between Hydro and the roads department, one person noted, because Hydro has just blasted at rock for new poles which the municipality plans to re-blast this summer to straighten out a bad curve.

Instead of each person phoning the roads department with complaints, the association encourages them to funnel their comments through Benson, who then speaks with the strength of the 600-member association behind him.

Association president Bob Wigmore applauded Dysart council for keeping its budget to .26 per cent. However, with the county's increase of 35.7 per cent and the board of education's overall increase of 10 per cent (some municipalities, such as Dysart, pay more because of a larger tax base), property taxes are increasing by 12.25 per cent. Wigmore said he is drafting a letter to the county and board to tell them "how to develop a budget on a zero base."

About 50 representatives from Kennis Lake attended a meeting at which county officials explained their budget increase. They were not impressed by the answers, Wigmore said. "In a restraint period, a 35 per cent increase is not acceptable."

Although he had said he would come as a guest speaker, Councillor Brian Watts did not attend the meeting and Wigmore answered any questions about the budget. Wigmore noted that a pressure group is forming against the county's budget and received approval to write a letter of appreciation to Dysart Councillor Murray Fearrey.

"He's the one politician who will stand up and be counted and be consistent," said one man, adding that Reeve Bill Davis "waffles depending on where he is."

The support of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations will also be enlisted to fight tax increases.

On the dump situation, it was noted that the people who cause the problems aren't the ones who care enough to attend the general meeting.

"We must maintain the quality of life here," Wigmore concluded. "We ask for your input, we ask for your co-operation."

Minden won't pay costs of moving delay

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The municipality cannot be held responsible for the costs incurred by a man who wasn't able to move into his new house because water and sewer were not hooked up, Minden council says.

"I sympathize with you but you're caught up with the red tape of bureaucracy just like everyone else," Deputy-reeve Mike Maher told Paul Mayo May 9. "We've done as much as we can. I sympathize with the mess you're left in but everyone's been left in a mess."

Mayo started to build a house last summer on the Bobcaygeon Road. When it was completed in August, he didn't apply for an occupancy permit because he knew none would be granted to a home without water and sewer hook-ups.

He had to wait until November before he could move in and asked council to pay $1,500 of his interim rental costs.

"What I'm for is not what the overall delay cost me," said an irate Mayo.

But council said it allowed him to go ahead with construction of the home as a favour. The additional load on the sewer line had not yet received Ministry of Environment approval, but councillors wanted Mayo to be able to build in the warm weather. If he had waited until the hook-up approvals in November, winter construction would have been lengthier. As it was, digging the holes for the hook-ups damaged the roadbed, making it more costly for the municipality.

"We were held up by the Ministry of the Environment and the weather to get the line in there," said Maher.

"It wasn't because we weren't trying," he added. "In the same light, we should say we lost the revenue for (property taxes) for the same time we lost on waiting for approvals."

"We tried to co-operate and that was a mistake. The sewer line, late as it was, caused problems on the road. We should have waited until this year but in good faith we went ahead and now you're trying to penalize us and I don't think that's fair."

Building inspector Tom Huberchek noted that MOE approval for the new Staanworth seniors complex is not in yet, and that might delay construction by a year because council no longer wants to issue building permits until all hook-ups are approved.

THIS IS HOW YOU KILL THEM: At the Kennis Lake Cottagers' Association meeting on Saturday, Dan Buhl of the Haliburton Forest Owners Association demonstrates how to kill tent caterpillars. You poke open the tent and spray the inside with a dish soap and water mixture.

Snowdon increases spending by 16 %

by ED WHITE

Staff Reporter

Snowdon has increased its 1991 spending by 16 per cent, but Reeve George Simmons says council had to do a lot of cutting to get the increase down to that level.

The overall property tax increase, including the county and board of education levies, is 14.5 per cent.

The preliminary budget saw a 40 per cent increase in municipal spending, and "everyone had to put their heads together to decide where cuts could be made ... When you're going from 40 down to 16 per cent you're slashing things."

Many projects have been put off for a year, including cemetery restoration, and other spending has been reduced, such as discontinuing the $25 per child payment for Snowdon's use of Minden's recreational facilities. Monies for the planning committee and official plan have been halved, and office and advertising costs have been reduced.

For 1991 the remuneration for councillors and staff will be the same as last year.

Where spending has increased is in the county levy, the board of education levy, and in some areas of municipal spending. There are 17 per cent increases for fire protection and roads, and a 19 per cent increase in environmental services, primarily landfill costs.

Simmons says the cuts this year are deep, and the situation "may get worse next year," but because spending is being kept under control "taxpayers should be happy."

Lutterworth taxes up 12%

by ED WHITE

Staff Reporter

Lutterworth's spending for 1991 has been held to a 2.5 per cent increase, although the county and board of education levies bring the overall tax increase to 12.59 per cent.

Reeve Carol Puffer said "we've done well to keep the levy at 2.5 per cent."

The biggest increases are the county and board of education levies, which have risen greatly this year.

More municipal money will be spent this year on roads, recreation, and central government expenses, but this is off-set by a large saving on expenses on the landfill, which underwent a lot of hydrology work last year.

Not stocking Kennis Lake anymore is 'for biological reasons, not economic ones' tinue tracking the trout this summer. (One of the fish was caught and killed last year.) Either scuba diving or snorkeling, they'll locate the spawning beds to see if they can do anything to improve the area, such as adding more rock.

"Meanwhile, 'the number of fish were catching is relatively high.' Populations are rebounding so he is proposing the MNR stop stocking the lake."

"When you stock fish in a lake with natural fish you can do more harm than good," he said of his reasons. Sixty to 70 per cent of the fish caught are natural, and the stocked fry cost 50 cents to $1 to put in the lake. "We're far better ahead to let it continue on its own."

Noting that some hatcheries are being closed and funding is being reduced, McLeish says not stocking Kennis is "for biological bell for details.) Had those practices not changed, "by the year 2000, we would have run out of good forestry trees. . . .

"We hope we will keep Kennis Lake green," Buhl said. "The remedy is not an easy one and it's of absolute essence we put on enough pressure on politicians to renew their will (about protecting renewable resources)."

Teenager Laura Lancia then told the lakeshore owners that she and four friends will be providing a babysitting service on Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays at a cabin by the beach at Kennis Lake Marine.

Roads were a hot topic of discussion, as people described all the potholes and washboards along the route from city to cottage. Gary Benson outlined the municipality's and county's road improvement plans and said he was getting good

County forgets plans to not pass closures

The county isn't going ahead with its plans to have the Chief Administrative Officer "rubber stamp" shoreline closure applications.

To save paper and time, county council had decided not to formally approve the numerous applications, which were photocopied and distributed to each councillor. Passing the applications was already just a formality so council decided to discontinue the procedure.

However, some municipalities said the subsequent 60-day waiting period, in lieu of county's formal approval, would adversely affect them.

So at last Wednesday's meeting, council once again passed several closures. The process was sped up and pared down by posting the closure information on the walls outside the chambers before the meeting, and by passing the closures all at once.

Trailer sites said to save the shoreline

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

In an effort to save vacant shoreline from development on Pelaw and Big Redstone Lakes, a Dysart man wants to establish wildlife trailer sites.

The sites are on the fringes of the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife reserve and would use its system of leasing, which would be monitored by Peter Schleifenbaum, manager of the Forest.

Dan Buhl presented the idea to Dysart council last Monday and said developing 30 sites is the best way to preserve the land from developers and trespassers. "Any objectors of the plan are playing a numbers game," he said, referring to eight cottagers and residents who have objected. "Some other motives could be the greed of developers wanting to cash in on the land."

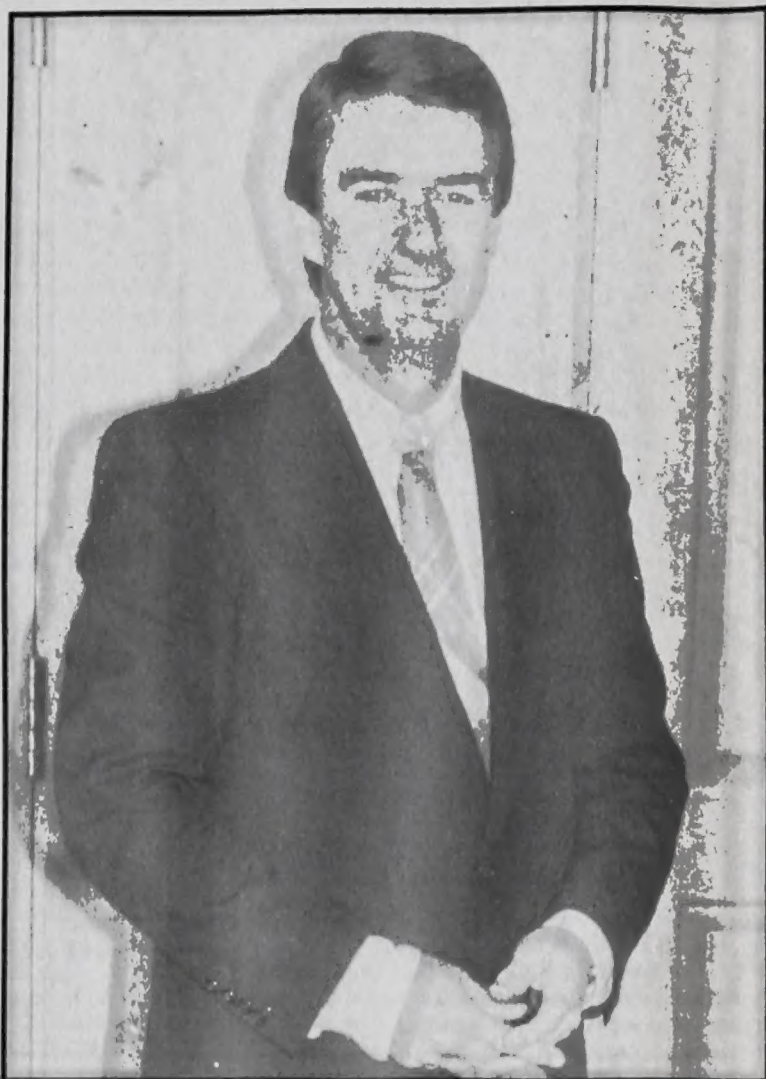

Council was concerned Buhl wanted to turn the sites into trailer parks, but he dismissed this notion. "A campground has electric hook-ups. There's no way anyone will put in hydro or a sewer system."

Instead the sites would use outhouses and leech pits. Two sites would share a pit, as suggested by the Health Unit which went over the sites.

Schleifenbaum was present to show his support of the plan and said in comparison, it would take a hundred wildlife sites to cause the same amount of environmental damage one cottage would.

"This is something that is most involved," said Reeve Bill Davis, adding a water quality study would be needed to see if Pelaw Lake could accommodate the sites. Dysart's Official Plan says Pelaw had the capacity for 17 seasonal residences. This has since been upgraded to 28.

Buhl also assured council neighbours of the sites would not be bothered because conditions would be drafted into the lease to prevent excessive noise, including the use of powerful motorboats. "We want quiet tenants," he said.

SMILING IN TOUGH TIMES: Ontario Real Estate Board President Tom Bosley says even though the economy is improving, realtors still have much to fear from Ottawa and Queen's Park. He was guest speaker at a conference hosted at PineStone Inn last week.

Firm seeks therapist for counselling centre

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

After trying the regular channels, the committee establishing a mental health service for adults has hired a recruiting firm to find a senior therapist.

"It's the uncertain economic times," says Gena Robertson of the unfruitful search for the Haliburton County Counselling Centre's only full-time staff person. People are cautious of pulling up a family and moving, especially when it's a new program.

Two series of interviews have been held and the one person the job was offered to accepted a job elsewhere.

The recruiting firm — known as "head hunters" in the trade — appeal directly to suitable candidates. They do pre-screening, psychological profiles and preliminary interviews so by the time the local committee meets them, "the candidates should be fairly committed (to the project.) They've eliminated a lot of our work."

The firm expects to have candidates by the end of May or first weeks in June, and must work until a suitable candidate is hired. As soon as the senior therapist is hired, the committee will hire the part-time staff person.

The counselling centre has received funding for an office and one-and-a-half positions. There is no other mental health service for adults based in the county.

Realtors strive to improve their image

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

It is hard for a business to escape a bad image, but some realtors locally and provincially are trying to cut the albatross of disrepute from around their necks.

"Twenty-two years ago people used to say realtors were one step above used car salesmen. Now they say we're one step above lawyers, which I guess is an improvement," joked Ontario Real Estate Board President Tom Bosley at a conference at the PineStone Inn on Wednesday.

But he also said it was a situation which should not be taken lightly. Realtors should try to promote themselves as "positive, helpful and necessary," and strive to improve their educational standards and competence.

He said the provincial real estate association has just released a book for first-time home buyer/sellers which will allay many of their fears and make them less fearful of agents.

And a study the board released in March, which showed home ownership as a better long-term investment than treasury bills, gold, or stocks, has given the home-selling business a much better public image.

But the most important way to improve the public standing of the real estate agent is education.

Hockey talent is rewarded

Talent should be rewarded, said Dysart council as it agreed to contribute $300 to each of Haliburton's five championship hockey teams.

"A championship team is a championship team. They should all be treated the same," said Councillor Dorothy Baker, as council decided how to split up donations at last Monday's meeting.

Linda Beachli, president of the Haliburton District Real Estate Board, says she hopes the new provincial government will pass a bill making at least two days per year of educational seminars mandatory for licensed realtors. "We have to prove our credibility to the public. We say we're professionals, so we should be willing to act like them."

The last bill requiring real estate agents to take yearly educational classes died at Queen's Park because, Beachli says, the government didn't want to upset older realtors who were afraid of failing the courses. But Beachli says the educational courses, on topics such as real estate law, mortgaging and financing, and property appraisals do not require people to write tests, and should not frighten anyone. She thinks the present provincial government will pass the legislation.

But even with higher educational standards and increased awareness of the lasting value of real estate, agents will still face the problems of many professionals. "People have misconceptions about realtors. They think you get up in the morning, sign a contract, and walk away with $5,000. They don't think about the other 500 nights you've been out working," said Maurice O'Callahan, a Toronto motivational speaker.

He stressed that they must do everything possible to help their clients, because they are not in the sales business, but customer service instead.

Deficit hinders housing market

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

It is not a good time for real estate agents, and the president of the Ontario Real Estate Board says a number of economic and political factors are holding back the industry's ability to recover from the current recession and political malaise.

Tom Bosley says both the federal and provincial deficits are hurting the economy, and, quoting American president Abraham Lincoln, said one "cannot establish security on borrowed money."

Realtors should watch the provincial government "carefully because of its support of rent control, a speculation tax, the wage protection fund, and its $9.7-billion deficit, all of which he says are potentially dangerous. He condemned the federal government for getting rid of the housing minister's position in the cabinet, for its high interest rate policy, and its high deficits. "It's annoying to hear them speak about fiscal responsibility when they can't control their own spending. If an executive ran his company like that he would have been bankrupt long ago."

The recession was self-made by the federal government and has hit the real estate industry hard, Bosley said. Many firms have collapsed in the past six months, but Bosley says some failures are due to mismanagement. "Some people don't understand this industry. When times are good, they're very good. But when times are tough they better understand cash management."

But he says there are signs of an economic recovery. "Anyone with the financial staying power to last the next six months should see a far better 1991."

County court system in peril

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

A reduction in the number of court days in Minden may be a sign of more cuts to come, Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Bern Berry warned his fellow county councillors Wednesday.

"In my opinion we are in danger of losing the court system in Haliburton County," Berry said, after the Ministry of the Attorney General decided that a judge will hear cases in Minden every second Wednesday instead of every Wednesday. Those alternate court days will now be in Lindsay.

"Our services are very minimal now and now they're being eroded further. . . We're in trouble if we just sit back and let it hang idly."

Witnesses, police officers and ambulance attendants will now have to travel to Lindsay every second Wednesday if scheduled to appear.

AHRC Deputy-reeve Mike Maher, a retired Minden OPP officer, said that when an officer has to travel to Lindsay for court appearances, provincial taxpayers pay for his meals and likely overtime wages. Taxpayers will also pay for the witness's mileage. He also wondered if there would be a further back up of cases because Lindsay's courts would become "plugged up" with the extra strain.

"Is it affecting the OPP? Definitely," says Sgt. Steve Adam in an interview after the meeting. "Not only does it leave us short-handed but it increases our overtime."

If an officer has to appear in court on his day off, he must be paid time and a half for at least four hours, whether he appears in court for 10 minutes or longer. Since Lindsay's an hour away, "it doesn't take long to add up overtime," Adam says.

As well, if there are three separate impaired driving charges being dealt with on one court day, with three separate arresting officers and three separate officers doing the breathalyzer tests, all six must travel to Lindsay to give evidence.

The Wednesday court deals with criminal cases and provincial offenses matters are dealt with by a Justice of the Peace every second Tuesday. The Minden OPP has not had any substantial staff increases since 1987 and many feel it is already under-staffed.

The decision to change the court location to Lindsay was "in recognition of the fact there are a number of individuals who are charged who are not residents of Haliburton County," says Dianne Wylie, court services manager, in a telephone interview. If a person from Toronto is charged with an offense in Haliburton, his court appearances will now be scheduled in Lindsay, which is less far to drive.

"To insist that people from Toronto drive to Minden is not serving the public," Wylie says. As well, if witnesses are not from the county, those trials would be attempted to be set in Lindsay. "We're just trying to improve the level of service."

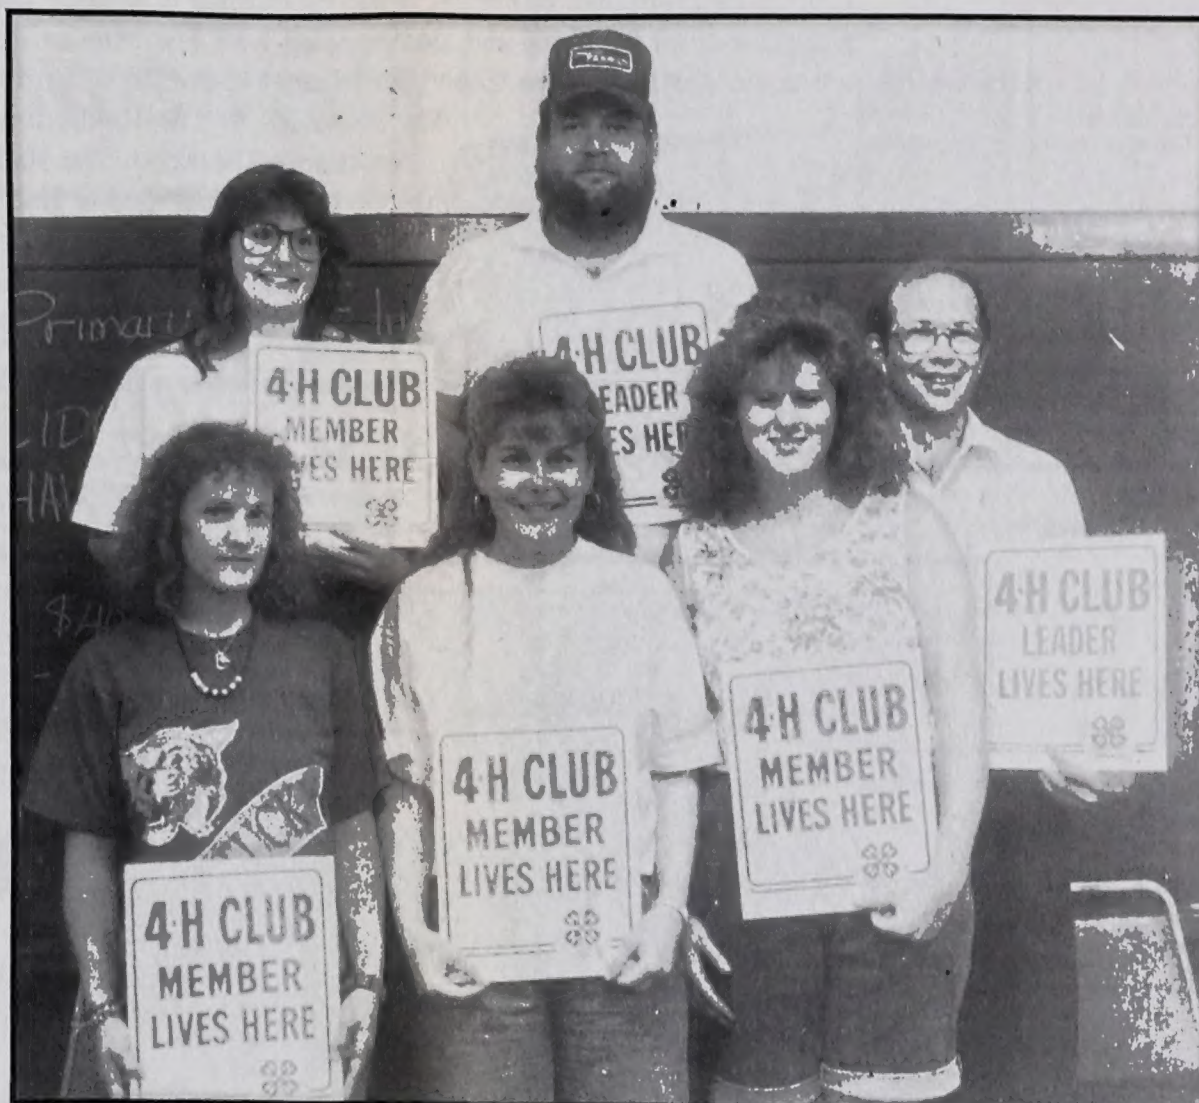

"Another factor is that the court facility in Minden does not provide adequate security," she says. There are no holding cells in Minden.

When the change was discussed, a Minden officer was in attendance, she adds, and had the opportunity to express objections.

As to fears this might cause a further backlog of cases, Wylie says "whenever Judge (George) Inrig sits in Minden, he's not sitting in Lindsay (so the court facilities there aren't in use.) This won't add to the strain in Lindsay."

It might actually help, she said. If the judge hears all of that day's cases before the end of the day, in Lindsay other things might be fit in.

County council will send a letter of objection to MPP Dennis Drainville and other concerned parties.

Haliburton's 4-H Club saddles up for success

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton region 4-H Club held its first meeting in Lochlin last Tuesday night, but only half of those who originally expressed an interest in the Club were there to start the projects rolling.

Jean Campbell, rural organization specialist with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food which sponsors the 4-H program, said she was impressed by the older turn-out even though she expected to see many more younger participants.

"You have four very capable members here who can tell you what they want to learn," Campbell told leaders Godfrey Tyler and Casey Cox.

The four members who did attend — Wendy Abernethy, Gesa Fluegel, Tina Cox and Debbie Barry — all expressed an interest in improving their riding skills and learning horse training and management. But it was left undecided who would help the 17-20 year-old participants in their project.

"We already know how to ride," said Tina Cox, "it's just that there are a lot more work horse people in this area than there are after all, "learning by doing" is the 4-H motto.

The 4-H stands for hands, heart, health and head. The program gives those from the ages of 10 to 21 the opportunity to learn about livestock and crop production, financial management, food preparation, and rural recreation. By working on group projects, the

"... there are a lot more work horse people in this area than there are saddle people who can help us improve."

saddle people who can help us improve."

Campbell encouraged the leaders and members to find someone who could help them improve their skills. "If you leave it up to yourselves to learn it individually, you won't get much further," she said. "You can't learn horse management from a book, you have to do actually do it." And 4-H helps to develop participant's skills in communication, leadership, problem solving and goal setting.

The Haliburton 4-H is still recruiting new members who are invited to attend the club's second meeting at Sinc Nesbitt's on Deep Bay Road, west of Minden on June 3 at 7:30 p.m. For more information phone Casey Cox at 286-4432.

Skateboarders ask for space

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Local skateboard enthusiasts may soon have a safe place to practice their favourite pastime.

Kevin Hurley asked council to provide a place in town for him and his friends to skateboard.

Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater said finding such a place will be a problem. But Reeve Bill Davis said something should be done.

"I don't want kids getting hurt. Maybe someone in private industry could come up with something?"

Head Lake Park was suggested, but paving portions of the park would be expensive.

The Dysart Arena was ruled out because skateboarding would damage the already-broken ice pad.

Council will approach the Haliburton Curling Club to see if it would consider renting out its cement floor.

Residents fear for winter road

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Winter will spell trouble for cottagers on Curry Drive near Haliburton Lake unless Dysart agrees to take over its snowplowing, council was told last Monday.

"We're well aware of Curry Drive," said Reeve Bill Davis to residents of the road. "But it's a very narrow road and our equipment would destroy some areas."

The man the residents hired to plow the road won't be doing it next winter. "We've talked to other contractors who said the price we paid would be doubled next year," said Linda Mason.

The cottagers were paying $50 a lot to have the road plowed. But less than half of the road's 50 residences contributed.

"That road's getting really bad. And several of us think in five or 10 ten years we'll be moving up here full time. The municipality should keep that in mind," said Mason.

"That in itself is creating a problem," added Davis. "We have so many roads to look after and the government isn't giving us enough subsidy."

EDITORIAL

Saying NO to taxes

Haliburton County councillors might find it more than a little ironic that their 1991 budget has much in common with the budget unveiled recently by Ontario's NDP government. Both think they can spend their way to better times. Both share a fundamental belief that the public is powerless to take meaningful action against tax increases they don't support. Both think it's possible to live in some kind of fiscal fantasy land, where the money you steal from taxpayers' pockets and squander on programmes designed to curry socialists' favour, does not erode their standard of living, or further harm an already sick economy. And both are beginning to feel a groundswell of opposition that may lead to an all out tax rebellion.

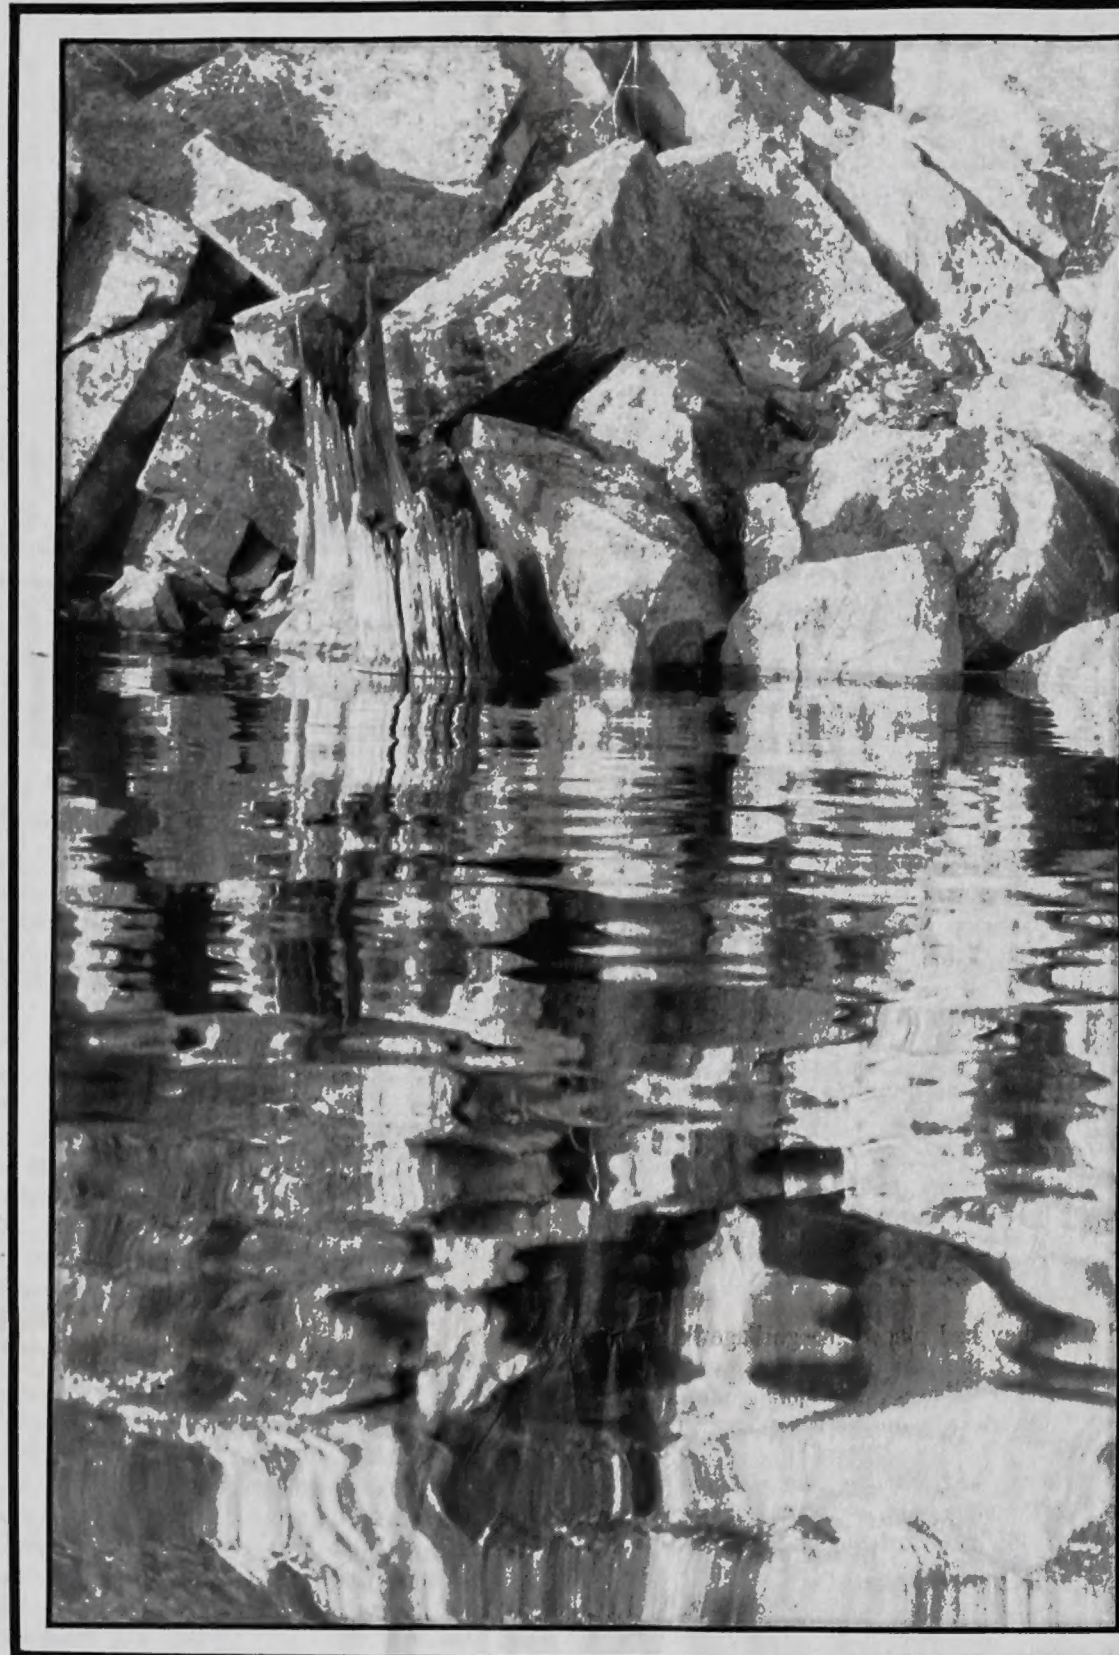

It shouldn't come as any surprise that the NDP has chosen to run up a record $9.7 billion deficit this year, and to grab more than $670 million in new taxes from people who are already among the most heavily taxed in the world. Knowing that the huge mistake that gave them a majority with just 38 percent of the vote, is unlikely to be repeated, the radical leftists in the NDP caucus are determined to force their profligate, grasping agenda onto the province as fast as possible, no matter how damaging the consequences. But one might have expected Haliburton County councillors to be a lot more attuned to the realities of main street in their respective communities. Many councillors are themselves in business, or employed by small business operators. Left wing idealists who have never had to meet a payroll assume Ontarians will tolerate more government interference in the marketplace and ever higher taxes, but local politicians can hardly claim similar ignorance.

The mood on main street is grim. Local people have never been as angry, frustrated and demoralized about the actions of their governments as they are right now. They're sick and tired of government waste. They're fed up with bureaucracy in all its guises. They're appalled by the endless numbers of facilitators and co-ordinators, dialoguers and interfacers swelling the government payroll here and elsewhere. They think the fifty or so social service agencies that are reported to be operating in Haliburton County — with new 'needs' being identified all the time — are far too many for the taxpayer to afford without driving the economy into ruin. The view on main street is that economic realities and fiscal responsibility must determine the actions of governments, just as they must in people's personal lives. We can't have what we can't afford, and we can no more afford the county budget than we can the budget of Dennis Drainville and his colleagues.

There is a glimmer of light in all this economic darkness, however — the flames of protest. Ontario's truckers, who are being driven out of business by government tax grabs and government policy, are expressing their frustration in the most dramatic way they can — by slowing traffic to a crawl on Highway 401. And their action appears to have widespread support, even among people inconvenienced by the protest. They are fighting for the survival of their industry, and it is a fight they deserve to win.

Similarly, local business people have begun the fight against the county budget in dramatic fashion, with full page advertisements and a delegation to county council. Their approach is reasoned and reasonable. They want to find creative solutions to a profoundly serious problem. Tax increases and government spending are killing Canada's economy and condemning future generations to poverty. If it takes a tax revolt to drive that message home, it might just as well begin in Haliburton County as elsewhere.

NDP budget puts people first

DRAINVILLE'S DIARY

MPP
Dennis Drainville

ON APRIL 29, the new government brought in its first budget for the province of Ontario. I am very proud of a budget that puts the needs of the people first in these hard times. For example, we are cutting taxes for families on low incomes by $50-million. For the agricultural sector, and of particular interest to Victoria-Haliburton, we have committed almost $90-million for farm assistance. Funding for protecting women and children against family violence has increased by 33 percent.

We will provide the economic stimulus to create 70,000 new jobs. This government is making a major investment in affordable housing with 35,000 units to be developed this year and another 10,000 to come. This will provide a major boost to the construction industry. As well, we will invest $4.3-billion in essential public facilities such as building schools, hospital and transportation systems. This will also help drive the economy and provide jobs.

To help those hard hit by the recession, the province will initiate a $175-million Employee Wage Protection Program. We will provide up to $57-million in loans to small and medium sized manufacturing firms struggling through hard times.

One of the most important aspects of this budget is that we have stopped down loading programs onto municipalities. The province will now pay for its own programs. The responsibility rests with us, not on the backs of our hard-pressed municipalities. For example, we have more than doubled funding of municipal recycling programs, and reforms to social assistance will relieve some of the pressure on local municipalities facing spiralling welfare costs.

Your provincial government is committed to fighting the recession, but not at the expense of programs and services to help people in genuine need. Nor will we allow education or health care to suffer. Rather, we have chosen to provide assistance where needed and provide employment through important public works.

Much debate has focused on the size of the projected deficit. However, it is important to remember that of the $9.7-billion deficit, only $1.5-billion is new spending. Lower revenues, the impact of the federal government cutbacks in transfer payments and higher welfare costs account for $5 billion dollars of the deficit. Another $3.2 billion dollars will be used to maintain existing programs and services, ie schools, hospitals, roads, etc. Finally, only a small portion of the deficit, about $1.5 billion, results from new programs put into place by this government. In other words, if we spent not one cent in new programs and services, Ontario would still face a deficit of $8.2 billion, bought on by factors out of our control; the recession and the cuts in funding from the federal government.

Though we have chosen to let the deficit rise this year in order to fight the recession, we do take it very seriously. Our three-year plan sets the province on a course to bring the deficit down as the economy recovers. By 1998 we will eliminate the operating deficit for this province.

This is an aggressive recession fighting budget. It will help the people of Victoria-Haliburton and the entire Province build sustainable prosperity for the future.

WHEN A FORMER Haliburton boy is honoured, it gives me great pleasure to report it to our readers. Such was the case just recently when Tom Hodgson was voted the Oshawa Rotarian of the Year. The award was announced at the Oshawa Rotary Club's annual past presidents day held at the Holiday Inn at Oshawa. The award goes to a member, selected by the past presidents, who has made a significant contribution to the club and to the community. According to an article in the Oshawa Times he was quoted as saying that he was very honoured to be selected for this award. "I never dreamed it would go to me," said Hodgson, a retired school administrator. Hodgson comes from a Rotarian family. His father helped found the Haliburton Club. "It is work I enjoy tremendously," he said. "Where else could you get the chance to talk to people from all professions and businesses." A member since 1978 Tom Hodgson has had a perfect attendance record over the past 11 years. Dr. Gary Kindree, the club's president, said that Tom is very deserving of the award. He's done a fantastic job as the club secretary for five years and that is a demanding position. Hodgson went to Haiti as the club's interpreter when they raised money for a fire engine for the French-speaking island. Since his retirement, Tom has been concentrating on his new career—painting. The club president in his closing remarks said "Tom is knowledgeable, understanding and very dependable—when you ask him to do something, it's done." I would like to join with everyone from Haliburton in offering our own congratulations to Tom Hodgson, a really fine gentleman and Rotarian.

Within the next week the children in Grades 1 to 3 inclusive in Haliburton County will be bringing home zucchini seeds supplied by the Minden Agricultural Society. These children will be participating in a contest for the largest zucchini to be judged by weight at the Haliburton County Fair on August 17th at 11:00 a.m. To help of the parents in encouraging the children to plant these seeds and keep them watered will be greatly appreciated.

The Haliburton Highland Secondary School Graduation Committee has had a hard task of raising money for their Graduation Party. On Sunday, May 12th they decided to hold a Topless Car Wash at the school and it paid off in a big way. When it was all over a total of $238. had been raised. A member of the committee told me that they were overjoyed with the support of the citizens from Haliburton. They would like to offer a big thank you to all those who helped out in one way or the other.

Joe Carlo will be at the Hammond Organ and will be performing two concerts in Bancroft on Wednesday, May 29th at 2-4 and again from 7-9 p.m. These will be held in the Cutlass room of the Best Western Sword Motor Inn on Hastings St. N. free of charge to the public and compliments of Jenkins Musical instruments, Bancroft, Ontario. He was first staff organist at the Kitchener Memorial Auditorium for a number of years, and at the same time was Music Director of CKCO-TV in Kitchener, Ontario. As staff organist for a major American music company, he toured the world in concert for some years.

One day last week a man walked into my office with a colorful maple syrup label which he had found at his home. It would be very hard to tell what year the label was printed but it would be my guess that it would be several years ago. The wording on the label is as follows: Pure Maple Syrup made in the old-fashioned way in Iron Kettles by J.H. Harrison & Sons, Donald, Ontario.

Well here we go again. I wonder how many times we have been down the same old road with the same old complaints? Down through the years we have wondered what we had to do to get name of the Highlands of Haliburton on the map. We often seemed to be wondering if we were being lost in the shuffle. It now seems that we are being left out of advertising magazines. In last Saturday's Toronto Star a twelve-page magazine-type insert was placed in each paper with the heading Our Summer Vacations printed on the front cover. Printed in Ontario, Canada for the Government of Ontario and the Ontario Ministry of Tourism and Recreation, it lists where to stay and the events going on in Ontario this summer. Every place in Ontario seems to be mentioned with the exception of the Highlands of Haliburton. Who is to blame for this oversight? It's happened a dozen times or more and it's hard to believe that after all these years we are still the forgotten country. What do we have to do to be recognized as a great place to come for your holidays or to stay and live here the year round?

A sticky solution for roads

MAN'S RELATIONSHIP with the animal world has always been a fascinating subject to me, and interesting examples just seem to keep turning up. In some cases we find them helpful, in others, not so very...

I believe this Thursday will be the first anniversary of last year's beaver pond problem in Haliburton village, and I gather things aren't really straightened out or back to normal physically or financially for those folks even yet.

In Alberta, it seems, some municipalities feel control of the rodents is part of their mandate, and they have 'beaver blasters,' many of whom used to be trappers, on their payrolls. Not something to start up in these tough, taxing times, I guess...

We're still suffering from beaver problems in Donald, too, though by no stretch of the imagination could it be considered nearly as bad as in town. This year's young beaver have apparently been finding the last few birch trees on the shore below our home — about the only non-evergreens left — a new and delicious treat.

We found more serious erosion problems from last winter where the previous generation gobbled up all of the trees along our beach, which we had been cultivating as a privacy screen.

That happened more than a year ago, but bureaucratic complications make it impossible to repair the shoreline damage for fear of incurring a gigantic fine... It's too bad we can't find some benefit from our horrendous beaver population — now that their furs are no longer saleable. In warmer parts of the world, most of the troubling animals are actually insects. (Well, they aren't vegetable or mineral, are they?)

Termites and fire ants are big business in the southern U.S. They are a serious problem in Central and South American as well. There are termites in part of Toronto, but not in the quantities they find where it's really warm, so I guess we're lucky.

In Brazil, where they have real problems with giant termite mounds all over the place, one ingenious highway department worker has found a way to turn things around and get some value out of what has been a traditional liability.

Brick-hard, the termite ant mounds dot the farm lands in some areas like a bad case of giant acne, and can even ruin the blades on tractor-drawn plows.

Brazil's road system was virtually destroyed during internal strife back in the mid-60s, and the process of turning what was described as 'a network of potholes held together by bits of asphalt and concrete,' into roads again has been a long one.

While supervising road maintenance crews made up of local backwoods workers, Anacleto Anglo found they were going out of their way to dig up material from the termite mounds to fill potholes. They claimed it lasted longer than just plain dirt.

Anglo, who was a chemical engineer, became intrigued with the idea. Analysis of soil from the mounds found that the termites build their mounds by coating each grain of earth or sand with some of their saliva, which both stuck things together and waterproofed it!

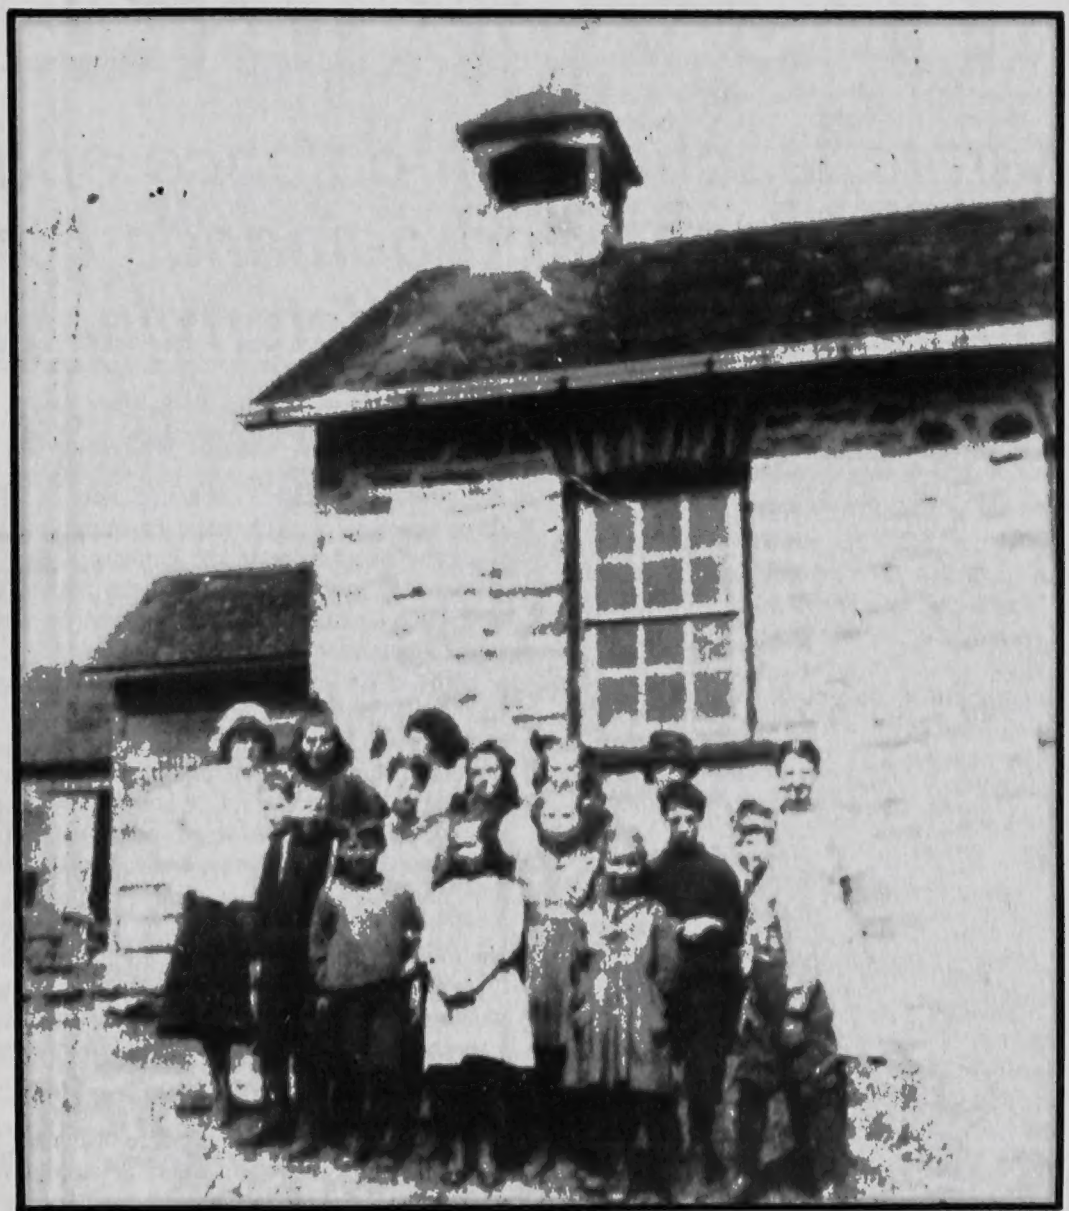

While the workers continued to use the real thing, Anglo set up a laboratory and eventually came up with his own patented brand of synthetic termite ant saliva, which is now in use for building roads and airport runways all over Brazil.

"It eliminates the need for gravel, cement, sand, and a great deal of dirt — all the ingredients over which a layer of asphalt is traditionally applied," he says.

Over the past 17 years, several million square yards of pavement have been built by laying a compacted, waterproof berm of soil and the right mixture of bug juice. It's being tested in the Amazon region to see if it can withstand the severe tropical rains there that can apparently wash away all currently known kinds of road waterproofing. I'm betting on the ants...

Perhaps more important to us in Canada are cold climate tests being performed in France. If it proves to have the holding power in freezing conditions as well, it might be a way of building better, cheaper roads where frost is a factor.

Perhaps it could even be used to build waterproof earthwork dams to prevent beavers from causing more damage with theirs...

PIC OF THE PAST

Our thanks go out this week to Phyllis Ackerblade of Minden, Ontario for submitting this photo showing the students standing beside the stone school RR8 Minden. The small girl in the front row with the dark dress is Wilma Coulter (Berry) who now resides at the Parklane Apartments in Haliburton. The girl on her right is her sister. If anyone is now a private dweller and we wonder if school out there could tell us the names of the other students in this photo.

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

AFELLOW BY the name of John Seymour put together a book in 1976 called 'The Guide to Self-Sufficiency.' Ed and I have been studying it evenings since we're on a 'how to keep from giving all our money to the governments and Ontario Hydro' kick. The book is a hoot, because apparently the author has really done everything he writes about. In fact, the book flap tells us that when it came to print, he was developing a 62 acre farm as the first school in the world devoted to teaching self-sufficiency, the aim being to bring self-reliance, self-respect, people, culture, and fun back to life on the land.

When I say he's really done everything, I mean every single thing connected with running a five-acre, self-sufficient, small holding. That means he and his family not only raised all their own animals, they also grew all the grains to feed them. They created all their own energy from sun, wind and water, made their own soap, spun and wove their own wool shorn from their own sheep. They even made their own beer and wine. We were very impressed. Nothing was wasted. Everything was part of the cycle of life. And, apparently, no one worked off the farm. (When would they find the time?)

At that point, Ed and I began to wonder just what they did for money, because no matter how self-sufficient they were, every now and then they would have to buy some materials. The book even mentions equipment for fencing. Even if you make all your own tools, as he did, you have to buy a forge and an anvil. Our theory is that he was probably some hot shot corporate dude with one of those type A personalities, who are always bordering on an ulcer or a heart-attack. Perhaps he had a medical scare that made him decide to go back to earthy living before his body decided to go back to the earth. It would take a good chunk of assets to buy a five-acre plot and turn it into a totally self-sufficient farm.

At any rate, I can't see us ever reaching his status. We're too late and too short of what-with-all. Too tired to chase the goats and pigs that escape the fences. I don't have time to make my own soap. And since we often have to dash home to feed the chickens, it's not likely that we'd have time to grind up the grain. Rendered lard is bad for our cholesterol. I don't can. If I can't dry it or freeze it, I barter with it. I weave, but you'll never see one of us shearing sheep. Ed does woodworking, but his tools make the little meter go around.

Someday, we'd love to install a windmill, and give Ontario Hydro back their meter. If rabbits weren't so cute, we'd raise them for meat. But the truth is our little five-acres of Tonarosa Farms North is probably as sufficient as it's going to get. And that isn't half bad. There's several vegetables we never have to buy. We have lots of extra greens, chickens and eggs to barter with. The ground is fertile, and so far, the air is clean.

We still envy Mr. Seymour his farm. If we were twenty years younger, maybe we'd try it his way. It's darned hard work, but rewarding. And at least, it would keep the tarmac from creeping over the prime farmland while millions of children go to bed hungry even in the lushness of North America.

Marj and Madeline Mallard

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

MARJ HAD BEEN SLOWLY going crazy all day. Now that the season was underway, and summer holidays were within shouting distance, days at the resort were as hectic as a foot race through a volcano. She felt as though she was going off in every direction at once with only half the time to do twice the work. So when the pump broke down and she had to go into town for a part, well, it was par for the course that weekend.

When Marj returned an hour later, the place was still standing. No great catastrophe had occurred in her absence. The staff had thing well under control and she breathed a sigh of relief. But when she began to walk down to her office, she heard an odd sound. Strangely distant, yet close by, Marj didn't know how to describe it. Then she saw an old metal garbage can lid lying on the grass, right in the middle of the lawn.

Wondering how on earth the old thing found its way there, she bent over to pick it up and realized the sound was coming from beneath the lid. There on the grass lay a very young duck. It was half lying, half sitting and something about it did not look right. Out of the corner of her eye Marj saw two boys, about nine years old, watching from behind a Maple.

Pulling herself up with all the authority in the world, she demanded they come over to the duck and tell her what they knew. Then the story came out. Apparently after Marj had left for town, one of the boys spied a mother duck with her ducklings in tow, swimming across the little bay in front of the beach. Wanting to cause a little excitement and make the ducks swim faster, the boys did something really dumb. He threw a rock at the ducks. They scattered quickly but not before one of the babies had been hurt.

The rock had hit its young leg, impeding movement. As the others swam out of range, the poor duckling tried desperately to join them only to swim round and round in circles. Since it wasn't very far from shore, the boy waded into the water, picked it up and put it on the beach. By now aware of her missing baby, the mother Mallard headed for the beach to retrieve it. But by then half the resort had gathered around to see the wounded bird and the mother took one look at so many humans and gave up.

After a short while, the guests grew tired of watching the young duck and left it to the boy and his friend. They weren't quite sure what to do with it now. Both wanted it as a pet and decided to see which could convince their parents first. Marj asked why they had placed the garbage lid on the duckling and they said that was so it couldn't get away. She shook her head, told them to stay right there and watch it while she went inside to phone the vet.

On the vet's advice, they carried the young bird back to the water, moved some rocks and sand around, making a small swimming area for it and placed handfuls of grass in the water as well. When in doubt, leave nature alone and it can often right itself, Marj explained to the boys, who were now feeling more than a little sheepish over the whole incident. The duckling, whom Marj had named Madeline the mallard, continued to swim in circles. It was difficult for Marj to leave it by itself but the vet said to give it time by itself.

She went inside, made some supper, wolfed it down without really tasting any of it, then casually strolled outside, coffee mug in hand. Heading for the beach, her eyes went straight to where they had made a special place for the duckling. Marj almost dropped her mug when she saw it. The poor creature was half under water, obviously suffering from hyperthermia and not in good shape at all. It was more seriously hurt than either she or the vet had realized.

Gently she scooped it up, wrapped it in a towel and placed that in a box inside her bedroom. Then she made a tour of the resort, announcing at every cabin that they had to keep the baby duck alive until she could get it to the vet in the morning. A rummage through the store room had produced seven doll-size baby bottles and with these they took turns feeding the duckling very runny porridge. It was a long night. Marj of course ended up doing most of the feeding as bedtime came early for the youngsters.

The saga of Madeline the Mallard spread over several weeks. A total of two weeks was spent at the vet's, plus a week in Marj's bathtub. During that time, a metal pin allowed the leg to heal properly. Madeline's wings expanded dramatically as did her voice. She quacked happily in the bathtub, diving under to pluck at the green towel he kept confusing for moss. Marj had placed a large rock in the tub for those times Madeline wanted a break from swimming.

The hard part was saying goodbye. But once the duck was given a clean bill of health, Marj knew she had to let it go. She brought it down to the lake, to the same spot on the beach where it had first been brought ashore. Hoping this would somehow seem familiar territory, she placed it into the water. In a flash Madeline was out of her reach and underwater. She had dove under an old log that jutted out from shore.

Marj waited but Madeline stayed under for the longest time. Then finally she surfaced and with not a backward glance, swam off to the middle of the lake. Relief tinged with sadness filled Marj's heart as she went back to the house. She knew Madeline was where she should be, but the happy quacking coming from the bathroom would be missed.

The following year, Marj was rushing around

Showtime in the Highlands

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

OF ALL THE different seasons and times, the May 24th week-end has for me always been the most special. It was then for the first time that I ever visited the Highlands. I needed a summer job to help pay for my final year at university. I remember standing in a trailer at Airport Farm that late May week-end as Marvin Brown said in his midwest American drawl, "Well, yes, I guess we could use somebody else to work with the kids." That was the first "yes" I had heard in a month of job hunting. When I asked where, he merely waved his hand across the slatted trailer window and, pointing to the blue hills over Bear Lake, said, "Over there."

That opportunity to live in a wilderness setting yet earn a living has always held for me a mysterious captivating allure. It is May when Haliburton finally awakens. May 24th has always been the unofficial date to open the family cottage. The resorts are busy dusting off the last of winter with fresh paint and high hopes while the store owners are checking their inventory. May 24th is the dress rehearsal for the Big Summer Show when our regular population of 12,000 begins to swell to its summertime peak of over 100,000. Summer here is half-hour lineups for most things you need, camp counselors trying to look cool while standing around outside the Molou, and tragically, far too many celebrating people who shouldn't be driving piling either into rock cuts or somebody else.

Ready or not, for better or worse, it is Showtime in the Highlands. It is something like farming. Whatever planting has been done is done. Now is the time everybody just gets to work.

Yet above and around the wave of human activity our wilderness just goes about its business. Late last night, laying in bed I heard for the first time the repeated call of our pair of resident Cranberry Lake loons. Back and forth they echoed again and again. I don't know who was happier, them or me, that they had finally returned. It is that wilderness call that has echoed down through the years that reminds me how fortunate we are to live in one of the most beautiful places in Canada.

IT'S A KICK!

Karate teaches self-defence and self-confidence and demands concentration, grace and determination

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

KARATE, IN JAPANESE it means "open hand". But the art of karate is more than just the sport of breaking through boards with just one 'chop' of the hand. And it goes far beyond the 'Kung Fu' images seen on tv in the early 1970s.

Karate requires concentration, grace and self-discipline, and these are the qualities Cliff Andrus helps his students focus on when they attend karate class every Monday night at the Dysart Community Centre.

Andrus created the Fudoshin School of Karate three years ago with the hope that supplying such a service would create the demand for it. His strategy worked. Membership in the club has held at about 40 since the first class, and the age of his students now ranges from five to 45.

Some of the club rules are a direct reflection of the disciplinary nature of the art form itself: Students will bow upon entering and before leaving class; students will maintain a serious attitude at all times; no profanity or loud talking is permitted; personal cleanliness is essential; feet and hands must be clean; finger and toe nails must be kept short.

Victoria Judge was not thinking of herself when she took her son Alexander, 7, to his first karate class after seeing an ad in the newspaper. But after watching her son, she too decided she would join "for the exercise". Now she has discovered more about the benefits of karate.

"It gives you self-confidence," she says. "It's not so much that I could take care of myself, but that I could take care of my kids if something were to happen."

Jodie Laine, 17, also sees in karate a valuable form of self-protection. She started taking lessons two years ago when her family moved to Haliburton from Toronto. She was already familiar with karate because several of her friends in the city were taking lessons.

"I know I can't always live in fear, and karate is helping me realize you can do something," she says. "My mom really likes the idea that I'm learning self-defense. She trusts me more when I go out, especially in the city."

But many people unfamiliar with the philosophy behind the art fear that the skills taught by karate could be translated into weapons of violence. This is an image Andrus has always tried to counter by emphasizing its creative, rewarding aspect.

In fact, rule number three for the Fudoshin School of Karate states that "no student will pro-

FISTS FRONT: The Haliburton karate school tries to counter the image of karate as a violent sport by stressing its creative and rewarding aspects. Students are taught to only use karate in self-defense. Students range in age from five to 45 and all participants have their own reasons for practising their discipline.

HIGH KICKING: At a Monday karate practice, 14-year-old Chris Andrus practises some of the steps taught to him by his dad, Cliff, who has a coveted black belt.

DEADLINE FOR APPEALING YOUR 1990 PROPERTY ASSESSMENT

Tuesday, May 28th, 1991

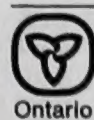

The final day for appealing your 1990 property assessment to the Assessment Review Board is Tuesday, May 28th, 1991. Your assessment will be used to calculate your 1991 municipal and school taxes.

You should appeal your 1990 property assessment (a) if you are dissatisfied with the amount of the assessment, even after discussing it with your Regional Assessment Office; (b) if you appealed your previous assessment and the appeal has not been settled; or (c) if you received a Notice of Property Valuation which does not reflect a settlement of your previous appeal.

The Assessment Review Board is an agency of the Ministry of the Attorney General and operates less formally than a court of law. It is authorized to decide if your property assessment is fair and equitable, compared with similar properties in your area. You may present your own case, retain a lawyer, or ask a friend or relative to act as your agent.

A Notice of Appeal form is available from your municipal office, your Regional Assessment Office, or the Assessment Review Board. You may also use the reverse side of a Notice of Property Valuation or write a letter. Appeals should be forwarded in writing to the Regional Registrar of the Assessment Review Board at the address shown below.

If you have any questions or require assistance in filing the appeal, please contact your Regional Assessment Office. The address and telephone number are in the Blue Pages of your telephone directory, under "Property Assessment Information."

Five HHSS athletes bring home the gold

Five Haliburton high school athletes won individual gold medals at the Central Ontario track and field meet last Thursday in Napanee, the best performance ever by the HHSS track team. Twenty-three other team members finished in the top four positions in their events, earning the right to advance to the regional qualifying meet in Brockville this Friday.

The most outstanding performance among the HHSS contingent was turned in by Andy Bacon, who won gold medals in the senior boys 200 metre sprint and the long jump, a silver medal in the 100 metre final, a gold in the 4x100 m relay, and a silver in the 4 x400 m relay.

Chris Greenfield won gold in the junior boys

400 m., bronze in the 100 m., gold as a member of the 4x100 relay squad, and silver in the 4x400 relay.

Bart Whiting broke the magic 11 second mark as he sprinted to gold in the junior boys 100 m. in a time of 10.87. He also paced the HHSS 4x100 squad on its way to gold.

Melanie Duchene was the only HHSS girl to win gold, putting in the longest throw of the meet in the senior girls discus.

Dustin Davis won gold on the strength of his final toss in the senior boys discus.

Other HHSS competitors who will go on the OFSSA qualifying meet in Brockville include: Jason Billings, 4x100 relay; Dave Carr, 4x100 relay and long jump; Karen Chatterton, high jump; Carol Forrest, high jump; Jan Haedicke, high jump; Kyle Hewitt, 4x100 relay; Arlene Jackman, 4x400 relay; Eric Johnson, 100 m. and 400 m. hurdles; Corbie Kent, discus and 4x100 m. relay; Danielle LaRue, 400 m. and 4x400 m. relay; Craig Mann, javelin and pole vault; Todd McCracken, javelin; Mark Morissette, hurdles; Hunter Obee, 400 m. hurdles and 4x400 m. relay; Corey Reynolds, pole vault; Arlene Simmons, triple jump; Jim Simmons, 400 m.; Ryan Timbers, javelin and shot put; Betty Verhovany, 4x400 m. relay; Jeanette Verhovany, 4x400 m. relay and 400 m.; Brian Waller, pole vault; Endres Weber, pole vault; and Dan Wuilleme, pole vault.

Many of the HHSS competitors turned in personal best performances in last Thursday's meet. If they can bring the same intensity to the OFSSA qualifying meet, they stand a good chance of advancing to the provincial championships in Sudbury.

AND A ONE AND A TWO: Wendy Bishop, at left, leads a small but enthusiastic group through aerobic routines at Rotary Beach in Haliburton last Thursday night. Not even the blackflies and the humidity could stop them from having a good, hard workout. Outdoor aerobics will be Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 p.m.

voke violence or allow him/her self to be provoked into violence, under pain of expulsion from the Club."

Nadine Fleury admits she was skeptical the night she took her seven-year-old son Cole to his first karate class in October. Now she is sure it was the right thing to do.

"We all don't want our children to learn to fight, but it's had the opposite effect," she says. "It gives kids the confidence where they don't have to prove themselves, and it builds character so kids don't have a quitting attitude."

Fleury faithfully attends karate practice each Monday night to watch her son. Cole's little successes in karate have led to success elsewhere in his life, she says. He has picked up the confidence to play baseball and hockey without being intimidated. "I see karate as a foundation," she adds, "it builds character and promotes balance."

These benefits are exactly what Cliff Andrus had in mind for the younger generation when he posted notices at the high school back in 1988 announcing that karate classes in Haliburton were underway.

These same benefits are what have kept Andrus himself involved in karate for more than 20 years. His dedication to the art is apparent by the belt around his waist. Four years ago he earned his black belt, the most prestigious of seven colours of belts which indicate an individual's level of skill in karate.

At the end of each class, students are reminded of the purpose behind the art when they recite the Club's motto in unison: "The ultimate aim of karate lies not in victory nor defeat, but in the perfection of the character of its participants."

And with that in mind, all those exiting respectfully take a bow.

Ban remains on games at lunch

School students will still be prohibited from playing video games during weekday lunch-hours.

Herschel Jacobs, owner of Perino's Pizza in Haliburton, wanted the ban on lunch-time teen patronage lifted. The restaurant adjoining the video parlour is open, and many students want to play a few games in their time off.

But Dysart councillors felt this would encourage truancy and make students late for school and would not change the by-law controlling video parlour operations. "It's an invitation to skip," said Reeve Bill Davis at last Monday's meeting.

However, most councillors did agree with Jacobs' request to have the parlour open on Sundays during the summer.

"Everything else is open," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater, to which Councillor Dorothy Baker added "I think of it as being another aspect of sports and you don't put a damper on Sunday sports."

"I don't think it should be open Sunday on principle," said Councillor Bob Nichol.

SSFC in tight squeeze as its popularity grows

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The growing popularity of the Haliburton campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College is putting the squeeze on facilities, the college president told county council Wednesday.

"Our problem is space, it isn't demand, and there aren't a lot of industries saying that right now," said Brian Desbiens. "We need to be planning (for expansion) now."

Enrollment is up 5.3 per cent this year and there are 13.5 per cent more people applying for courses next year. At the Haliburton campus, "one of our special jewels," more than 3,000 students registered for a myriad of courses and 3,400 students are expected next year. Sixty-five per cent of them will be enrolled in School of Fine Arts courses, which now attracts 2,000 people to the area for five weeks in the summer.

"Three years ago I remember talking about 1,200 students," said Desbiens. "That's a phenomenal growth under (Principal Barb Bolin's) leadership."

"We're offering the right kinds of programs which are in demand."

Some of those courses include career assessment, job re-entry, masonry, oil burner maintenance, carpentry, baking, sheet metal working and one apprenticeship course for horticulture. In 1990, the Haliburton campus provided more than $700,000 worth of industrial training.

Of the $1.2-million needed to run the campus, all but $103,000

'Our problem is space, it isn't demand'.

stays in the county. When dollars are spent here, it's estimated the money is circulated 2.5 times. That doesn't take into consideration the amount students spend locally, especially those who arrive for the summer program.

"We'll continue to offer more and more credit courses so people don't have to leave," said Desbiens. There will also be special attention paid to people who have been displaced because their companies closed or laid off staff. (A course has just finished for former G.W. Martin employees.) The college has also signed "linkage agreement" with the school board to "help kids keep motivated to stay in school."

"We can streamline and adapt training to specific needs," he said, congratulating the county for going ahead with its economic development strategy plan, which calls for close links with the college. "It's only when we work together that we are able to achieve great things. Separately we are weakened."

Yet little more can be achieved without more space. Now that the kindergarten classes are moving out of the former Lakeview school, the campus has more room, but it's not enough. (The School of Fine Arts is especially bursting at the seams, especially after the board of education turned down a request to use the high school for one more week in August.)

"If we are to continue to grow as an economic entity," the campus must grow. "We have a tremendous network of professionals and dedicated staff but we have a major space need."

"People come here for the school and the beauty of the area. We can be a vehicle to promote other activities. Likewise, if you can assist us that would be very helpful," Desbiens said.

When asked about the college's success rate, Bolin said 65 to 70 per cent of people find jobs, although she has noticed that more and more students are using their courses here as a springboard to other post-secondary education.

"This is not a good economic year (to judge the success rate) because there are not a lot of jobs to come out to," she said.

Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis if the School of Fine Arts saw itself as the Banff of the east. "One has to dream to create realities," Desbiens said, adding that the Banff school has more facilities and a very supportive business community. Earlier, he said "Our only parallel is Banff School of Fine Arts, which is alright for the West."

Jokingly, Davis also asked if the college would offer a course on how to construct a county budget.

"We're extremely proud to have Sir Sandford Fleming College in the county and someone of Barb Bolin's calibre," concluded Warden Carol Puffer, who also agreed to the need of "working towards mutual growth. We hear what you're saying about space."

SEEING THE WORLD THROUGH BLINDERS: Dental assistant Carol Florence shows Grade 5 students at JDHES what it would be like to lose their peripheral vision. The health unit uses a multi-disciplinary approach to the show how physical disabilities affect people and the importance of dental health.

Demonstrations sweeten lessons of dental hygiene

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Just because they don't have a lot of tooth-aches doesn't mean children don't have to see their dentist once a year, and the Haliburton health unit hopes its informal presentations at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School last week will convince them of this.

"Kids just don't have cavities any more, so they get very slap-happy about brushing," says dental assistant Carol Florence. The result: increasing amounts of gum disease amongst children, a problem that used to be spotted when they went to the dentist for a check-up or to have a cavity filled.

Now, with new dental techniques cutting down the amount of cavities, children brush less often and their parents are sending their young ones for check-ups less frequently, so conditions such as gum disease are allowed to develop.

"We went to a school in Victoria County and there were quite a few cases of Gingivitis (a condition where gums become hardened and turn bright red at the edges)," says Florence. "We were really shocked."

They noticed a few cases at JDHES although they were not as far progressed. The condition is not serious if treated at an early stage, but the longer it is allowed to persist the greater the damage. Florence hopes presentations such as the health unit's will make children more conscious of dental care.

The presentation was a series of displays showing various dental and other problems, and informing children how to avoid them.

The three dental assistants split up every class which came through, and informal demonstrations and discussions tested their knowledge of dental hygiene.

In one part of the exhibit, children were asked to decide whether certain common foods and drinks contained sugar. After the children answered, a dental assistant would take the substance, hold it above a flame, add a chemical to it, and show whether sugar was an ingredient. Gasps of surprise came from the lips of many children when they were shown milk contains a lot of natural sugar.

once again, getting ready for the summer season. The weather had been bad and she was behind schedule. One of her friends pulled into the yard and came bounding upstairs, two at a time. Marj almost hated to be interrupted, but knew she needed a break. She put the kettle on just as he burst into the room.

"Marj, I think you better look outside," he told her, pointing to the window. Marj turned to look. There was a large female Mallard waddling across the lawn, with a green-headed male following behind. Madelaine hadn't forgotten.

"I guess she wants my approval on her choice," smiled Marj.

CHACE has new home

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It might be a bigger location but when dozens of children and their parents arrived at the new Minden CHACE Resource Centre, it still didn't seem big enough.

"Finally, Minden has the centre it really deserves," CHACE Administrator Sue Valm said at the crowded opening ceremonies on Wednesday. "I'm happy families can benefit from it all."

"Having people show up hasn't been one of our problems," said parent and board member Bev Clark. The new location behind the Sears building is double that available at the old location on the corner of Main and South Water Street, which was often overcrowded with pre-school children anxious to meet their friends and play with all the neat toys. After trying to find a location to build a new centre, CHACE moved into the former Sears office early this month.

"Are you excited," asked supervisor Doris Thompson. "Before I really hadn't the energy to be excited but today I am so excited to see it all come together. A big thank you to all the people behind the scenes. If it weren't for the parents, this day wouldn't have come together."

"For the children, for the community, Doris and I officially call the Minden Resource Centre open," said Alice Dana, MPP Dennis Drainville's constituency assistant. She also said the centre is an "exciting and necessary support system (which is) alive with love that is indicative of this community."

The bright and airy centre, which was decorated by Mary Wallace and Carol Emmerson, has plenty of play space for children, a modern kitchen, and a large play area outside. This is also the fifth anniversary of the resource centre, which provides social opportunities for children and parents.

Tips nip failures in the bud for gardeners

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Amateur gardeners beware! Jack Frost, inadequate water supplies, and rocky soil may make dreams of Babylonian gardens disappear in a puff of ugly reality.

"Everything up here needs more taking care of," says Tracey Wilson, a garden designer at Country Rose in Haliburton. "In the Highlands weather conditions are much more varied than in the city."

And she says people may get in trouble if they try to set up a garden without knowing what they're doing. For example, someone might like two types of flowers, and want them together in a garden. They buy them young, when they're small, not realizing when they grow they will be very different in height.

Another problem arises when someone wants to have trees and shrubs in their garden, but isn't able to tend to their garden throughout the summer. "June and July are extremely hot, and people lose their shrubs, annual flowers, and the grass on their lawn because they don't water them enough."

Wilson designs garden plans for people who know what kind of a garden they want, but aren't quite sure how to plan it. She checks out the client's land, listens to their ideas, then goes to her drawing board to work out a design.

She considers the type of soil, the amount of sun, and other factors when formulating a plan.

Wilson stresses she is not a landscape architect, but rather landscape designer. To be the former demands more education, but the latter's skills tend to be less expensive.

Children learn consumer smarts to fight unnecessary tooth decay

They were also shown cans of drinks, and asked to decide which ones were better for them. "Which one of these is better for you?" says Carolyn Ludlow, holding up two fizzy orange drinks.

Some say one, some the other, neither group really knowing. "If a label on the can says 'juice' then it has something which is good for you. If it just says 'drink' it isn't as good for you."

Teaching the children consumer smarts is part of the demonstration. "The people making these want you to drink their drink, so they try to make it look even better than the other one. But we know now that if it doesn't say juice it isn't as good."

They are also shown how some things they eat and think are safe snacks, such as potatoe chips, are actually very dangerous ones on the teeth. But other snacks can actually clean teeth, such as old or medium cheddar cheese.

And it's not only their own teeth the children are being taught to look out for. Since many of them will be babysitters soon they are taught to not let babies go to bed with a bottle full of milk or juice. Many parents don't realize that babies will often go to sleep with a mouthful of the liquid which, when mixed with saliva, becomes sugar and erodes the infant's teeth. By letting babies have water only at bed-time, many will grow up without this early damage.

The exhibit contains information on other areas of health. At one station children can test if they are listening to their walkmans at a dangerous level. They are also shown how brain injuries or diseases such as Alzheimer's affect people. Florence says the health unit is trying a multi-disciplinary approach to health education. They hope that if children are shown a range of health concerns they will develop an overall appreciation for healthy living.

One demonstration which is particularly effective is about smoking. Children are made to run on the spot for a while, then they are handed straws and told to try to breathe through them. "It's hard, isn't it? Well, that's what it is like to breathe if you smoke."

And if the breathing aspect doesn't impress them, an economic argument is bound to work. "If you smoke a pack a day for a month it will cost you $182. Does anyone have $182 they want to spend on cigarettes?" A group of shaking heads registers the answer 'no.'

Florence says the displays and demonstrations are a real hit. "The kids just love them. They're a lot more fun than sitting in class listening to a lesson." This is the first year the health-unit has used this casual approach to its dental education, but Florence says they won't be able to do it next year because "the kids would say 'we've already seen this' and not learn anything." She says they will try to think up some other way of making dental education interesting and fun for children.

Drunk driving message hits home

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

The message was loud and clear at Haliburton Heights Secondary School last week: DRINKING AND DRIVING DON'T MIX.

Arrive Alive-Drive Sober Week was highlighted with an assembly on Wednesday which was meant to bring the message home.

OPP Constable Mike Maybee told hundreds of students that he has lost track of the number of car accidents he has investigated since he joined the police force in 1972. Maybee has often had to tell people that their loved ones have been killed, and it is all that much harder, he says, to tell grieving people that the other driver was intoxicated.

"I have been struck in the face, one person fainted and one man had a heart attack when he was told his wife had been killed."

Maybee asked the students to sit up in their seats, put two feet on the ground, take one more look around, and not move. He relayed the story of an accident he was called to where two boys, eight-year-old twins, lay dead at the scene. They had been hit by a car while walking on the shoulder of the road "where people like me had told them it was safe to walk."

It was only 4:30 in the afternoon and the driver of the car didn't even realize he had hit the two boys. He had been taking pain killers for an injury he sustained in an industrial accident six months earlier and he was exhausted from working overtime to earn back the money he lost during that time. Maybee tried his best to get the driver charged with impaired driving, but in the end, he was only charged with careless driving.

Another accident Maybee was called to investigate involved a car out in the middle of a field. The car had obviously rolled several times and pieces of it were everywhere. When Maybee arrived, he saw blood all over the inside of the car and bloody finger marks on the dash board. A man lay dead in the front seat of the car, but it was obvious that he had struggled to help himself after the crash.

Tests showed later the man had been driving while intoxicated and that he had had some coffee at some point during the night. "The guy figured he was sober enough to drive, but he wasn't and he died as a result."

"Both those accidents happened in the Seventies," he said, "and they still bother me today because they were three needless deaths." Maybee told the students they could move in their seats, but to imagine that those five minutes they were sitting there unable to move could very well be a lifetime of paralysis if they were ever involved in a drinking and driving accident.

And this is how it is for nine-year-old Russell Winkler. When he was only three he, his sister, his mother and his uncle were hit by a drunk driver on a stretch of highway. His uncle was killed instantaneously, his sister and mother seriously injured and Russell is now a paraplegic. The driver of the other car had consumed 24 beers that evening. He was also killed.

Russell's father Peter was at the HHSS assembly to tell his family's story and to warn students of the dangers. "You know when I used to sit in school assemblies like this one, I didn't know what death was," said Winkler. "I've been sitting here and I couldn't help hearing the odd laugh," he told the Grade 9 and 10 students.

"This isn't a joke you know. Drinking and driving causes needless death all the time, and death is permanent," he told an attentive audience. "There's been a lot of loss in my family and it's all because of drinking and driving — and it's not necessary at all," he said looking at his son in a wheelchair.

"It isn't that difficult to ask for a ride or get a ride," Winkler told students. "And don't get into a car with a drunk driver or you might end up dead."

Grade 9 student Ted O'Connell then stood before students with some hard facts about drinking and driving. One 12 ounce can of beer is equivalent in alcohol content to 5 ounces of wine and 1.5 ounces of liquor. If someone has more than .08 per cent of alcohol in their bloodstream, he or she will be charged with impaired driving in Ontario. And in a nine-year period between 1973 and 1982, 686 drivers were killed in Canada because they were drinking and driving.

Wanda Mole, staff advisor for Ontario Student's Against Impaired Driving (OSAID), closed the assembly by saying that she hoped the message to always drive sober had been brought home. HHSS Principal Peter Forgrave was confident the message was heard by students. "Just looking around and seeing the expression on the kids faces, it was obvious it had a tremendous impact," he said.

One student in the hall after the assembly said he already knew about the hazards and wasn't going to drink and drive anyway. Sarah Bonfield, a Grade 9 student said the presentation was "quite touching" and that most of her friends were crying. Her twin sister Beth was also affected by what she had seen. "That was the saddest thing I've ever seen in my life," she said.

ALL FIRED UP: Smokey the Bear was on hand last Friday at the Haliburton Ministry of Natural Resources base to present plaques to Adam Reinwald, Deborah Nash, Lisa Reinwald and Katrina Matysek. They were four winners out of 300 county students who submitted entries in the poster slogan contest promoting tire prevention. Their entries will be judged at the district level in the weeks to come.

Stanhope cleans up

Now's a good time to do spring cleaning in Stanhope.

At Wednesday's meeting council introduced a new by-law to clean-up unsightly yards.

The by-law allows Stanhope's By-law Officer Jim Moore to immediately issue a warning to a resident with a messy yard. A written complaint is needed under the municipality's present by-law.

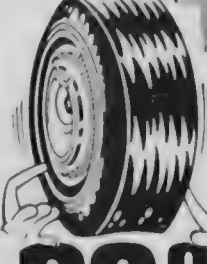

"The new by-law seems to have more clout," said Moore.

"Some parts of Stanhope seem a little like Dogpatch. We have to do something about our image," said Moore. As with the present by-law, both farms and residential areas fall into the same category. But consideration is given to contractors, or other licensed businesses which store large amounts of material.

Council will not to rescind Stanhope's present by-law and will include both in its property standards policy.

Braving the heights at the Dorset Tower

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

THE SIGN at the base of the tower reads "Warning: Climbers do so at their own risk". And every summer thousands of people travel to Dorset, braving the 100-foot climb to capture one of the most spectacular views of Central Ontario.

On the site of the present lookout tower once stood a fire tower built by the Department of Lands and Forests in 1922. It served as one of the most effective means of detecting forest fires within a 300-square-mile radius of the Haliburton Highlands and the Muskoka Lake of Bays region.

Norm McGuire's father Ferg was the last of the "tower men" to work shifts at the tower which closed in 1961 when the Department began using planes to locate forest fires.

"He saw forest fires all right," says Norm McGuire of his father. "He couldn't read or write but he knew the country so well he very seldom missed the location of a fire by much."

Ferg McGuire and Tom Paris, a ranger at the Ontonagon Lake tower just north of Dorset, would talk to each other over the ranger phone and with huge maps that slid back and forth on the floor, both men crossed readings to be as precise as they could when locating a fire.

"They could stand more heat and hardship than any two men in the country," says Norm McGuire. "They'd come out of the bush with blood on their faces from insect bites, and it didn't seem to bother them."

Norm also recalls his childhood days spent at the tower. "We used to climb the tower using the struts on the outside. Every once in a while you'd find a tourist who would give you ten cents to go up the struts, and if you were lucky, you'd get a quarter. That was good money in the 1920s."

The task of a tower man was, of course, seasonal, lasting only through the prime fire season. "We used to have a standing joke that with the first big rain storm in September we'd let them go," says Stan Booker, former deputy ranger at the Ministry of Natural Resources in Dorset.

Those like Ferg McGuire worked as hunting guides or with the Ministry for the rest of the year. But Ferg had a real passion for his job in the tower that took him beyond retirement age, which at that time was 70.

"I remember they sent Stan Booker on a run up there when they found out my dad was 73 years old. It was only noon, and they wouldn't even let him finish the day," says Norm McGuire.

Today, the tower is used strictly as a tourist attraction with bus loads of tourists flocking to Dorset each summer to view the hills and lakes of the region from 465 feet above ground. Stan Booker can recall when over 8,000 people climbed the tower on the first weekend it opened in September 1967.

He also remembers heading the project to drill a 300 foot well at the top of the hill next to the tower. Rumour has it that the well is actually an artesian well, gushing forth water at the same rate as a fountain.

Booker is amazed by the amount of water the well produces every summer and the distance people will travel to fill barrels of water to take home with them. But he insists that the water is extracted only by using a pump, hence officially dispelling the myth of the artesian well in Dorset.

Many residents in Dorset have voiced concern about the upkeep of the land at the base of the tower in past years. But Diane Griffin, chief administrative officer of the municipality says the Ministry of Natural Resources has decided to give the municipality $3000 this year to cover the cost of maintenance at the local level. This will undoubtedly enhance the beauty of the site and afford visitors the opportunity to picnic.

Today the Dorset Tower is used strictly as a tourist attraction, with breathtaking view of Central Ontario from 465 feet above ground. Visitors should pack a lunch and bring a jug for fresh water available from a 300' well

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT NOTICE

PUBLIC INFORMATION MEETING ROAD RATIONALIZATION STUDY Haliburton County

The Ministry of Transportation is presently carrying out a Road Rationalization Study within Haliburton County. The underlying purposes of the study are to ensure that roads within the area are under the jurisdiction of the proper road authority, and to attempt to devise a Provincial road system which will enhance the economic well being of the Haliburton - North Hastings area. Some roads could be transferred to Municipal jurisdiction, while others could transfer to provincial jurisdiction. At the present time, proposals are being considered which affect the following roads to some extent.

- Highways 502, 121 and 648
- County Roads 3 and 10
- Peterson Road
- Irondale Road

A public information meeting has been arranged for

Tuesday, May 28, 1991

at 7:00 p.m.

at the Library

in Highland Grove

Interested persons are encouraged to attend to hear a detailed presentation about the proposals and to comment or provide input to the Ministry.

HHSS students pen tall tales for younger folk

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

SITTING QUIETLY with eyes and ears wide open near the feet of our favourite teacher while she reads a story, is often one of our favourite memories of elementary school days.

Luckily this tradition hasn't changed as the students of Wilberforce Elementary proved Friday morning — but with an added twist. The stories weren't being narrated by their favourite teacher but by Grade 12 Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students.

For the last month, the students in Ann Varty's English classes have been putting their thoughts to paper composing their own story books. This is the third year Varty has had her students participate. And as in the last two years, the finished products are presented to local elementary students.

"It's a good motivator to get the students go-mon theme among the students' handiwork, and the younger children revelled in it. One of the stories which struck a popular note was Wes Hughes' Clarence Gets New Parents.

He wrote the book in rhyme: "Ma and Pa are mean, they make you eat your Lima beans, that's because they're wearing out." (Parents may be surprised to learn most of the students raised their hands when Hughes asked how many ever thought about trading in their own).

But as with any good fable, Hughes' story had a moral of don't be foolish like Clarence and stick with the parents you have. Most of the stories shared this characteristic.

In Arlene Simmons' Spike the Ugly Caterpillar/Buttercup the Beautiful, the running away from home scenario was explored, using a caterpillar as an example. Surprisingly, when Simmons asked if any of the students felt like running away, only one raised her hand.

But not all the stories had a moral. Some were

'What I like about their stories is they made them up out of their heads,' says a Grade 2 student.

ing," said Pat Clark, a Grade 3 teacher at Wilberforce. Her students have gathered in small groups, each clutching their writing folders filled with some of their own original works to share with their visitors.

The Grade 12s take turns reading their books out loud to each group of interested students.

"What I like about the stories is they made them up out of their heads," said Grade 2 student David Vickers. "They're good stories and they took time to try and do it right."

Despite the relatively short period of time in which the stories were penned, the HHSS students came up with some interesting topics which enthralled their young audiences.

Grade 3 student Tom Reed sensed a certain familiarity when he listened to Robin Lee read her Please Take Back My Baby Brother. Lee had it dedicated to "all the big sisters in the world."

As the title clearly suggests, a young girl wishes her younger sibling would disappear, until she realizes how much she would miss him not being around. "I really liked the end of it," said Tom. "I have a baby brother who've I wished would get beamed up."

Outrageous family stories seemed to be a common theme among the students' handiwork, and the younger children revelled in it. One of the stories which struck a popular note was Wes Hughes' Clarence Gets New Parents.

The students listening compared notes on the trips they've taken to a city and only one decided she would be more comfortable living there. "There's not enough people in the country," explained Grade 3 student Jennifer Woodward.

The younger students also were encouraged to read some of their original work, although some needed a little extra coaxing. Varty admitted in the beginning her students needed some coaxing themselves when they began to discuss the topic of children's literature.

"We talked about fairy tales," she says, adding some of the older students were a little uncomfortable at first. "But it didn't take long for them to come around to write their own stories."

Regardless of how long it took, the younger students clearly appreciated their story-telling morning.

Varty's writing project involved 65 HHSS students who visited other area elementary schools to display their work.

Although uncomfortable with the assignment at first, the HHSS Grade 12 students soon enjoyed the challenge of writing a children's story. Above, Ray Cook reads his 'Willie Winkles' Wonderful Wart' to Paul Rivers, left, and Jamie Quirion at Wilberforce.

Mann, his wife and two others from Minden drove to Sutton to hand over the vest to a bike group there. This year's ride is in Fenelon Falls, and bikers hope to raise $1-million for eye research.

4Cs' food drive a success

Haliburton's sense of community has shone through again.

"People responded well and it looks like we have enough to last us through to the food drive in the autumn," says Hadden Gillespie, director of the 4Cs.

At Easter, the local charity's cupboards were quite bare. With the recession and more people out of work, there was a growing demand for food year-round. Many people, who associate the 4Cs' food drive with Christmas hampers, didn't realize the need was so strong and a call for donations was put out.

"It's just remarkable how Haliburton responds," says Gillespie. As well as donations for food, many individuals and groups donated money.

If regular donations keep coming in as they have in past years — churches collect foodstuffs every week and some people make regular donations — Gillespie expects the 4Cs can meet people's needs until the Christmas food drive.

"I don't want people to stop," he says, but he also wants people to know their kindness has been appreciated by many local families.

MUNICIPAL WATER SUPPLY UPGRADING ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT

NOTICE OF PUBLIC INFORMATION SESSION Wednesday, May 22nd, 1991

As a requirement under Ontario's Environmental Assessment Act, the Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden hereby notifies all interested individuals and parties that a public information session will be held on Wednesday, May 22, 1991 for the Town of Minden's water supply upgrading project.

The project is being undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Environmental Assessment Act and is proceeding as a Schedule C type project of the Class Environmental Assessment for Municipal Sewage and Water Projects. The study is required to accommodate and service the water supply needs of the Municipality, as well as upgrade the existing water supply infrastructure system.

Individuals or groups are invited to attend this Public Information Session to be held on:

Wednesday, May 22, 1991

Council Chambers

Municipal Office

Milne Street

Minden, Ontario

From 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The Public Meeting is a drop-in type session and as such no formal presentation will be made. Members of the public are also invited to submit their comments in writing either at the time of the Information Session or directly to the following:

Mr. Clayton Cameron
Public Works Superintendent
Twp. of Anson, Hindon & Minden

AUDITORS' REPORT

TO THE MEMBERS OF COUNCIL, INHABITANTS AND RATEPAYERS OF THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SHERBORNE, MCCLINTOCK, LIVINGSTONE, LAWRENCE & NIGHTINGALE

We have audited the consolidated balance sheet of the trust funds of the Corporation of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence & Nightingale as at 31 December 1990 and the statement of continuity of trust funds for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Township's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform an audit to obtain reasonable assurance whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation.

In our opinion, these financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the trust funds of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence & Nightingale as at 31 December 1990 and the results of its operations for the year then ended in accordance with the accounting principles disclosed in Note 1 to the financial statements.

1. SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

The consolidated financial statements of the Corporation of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence & Nightingale are the representation of management prepared in accordance with accounting policies prescribed for Ontario municipalities by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. Since precise determination of many assets and liabilities is dependent upon future events, the preparation of periodic financial statements necessarily involves the use of estimates and approximations. These have been made using careful judgments.

(a) 1) Basis of Consolidation

These consolidated statements reflect the assets, liabilities, sources of financing and expenditures of the revenue fund, capital fund, reserve funds and reserves and include the activities of all committees of Council and the following boards, municipal enterprises and utilities which are under the control of Council:

Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence & Nightingale

All interfund assets and liabilities and sources of financing and expenditures have been eliminated with the exception of loans or advances between reserve funds and any other fund of the municipality and the resulting interest income and expenditures. There were no loans or advances at 31 December 1990 or at 31 December 1989.

6. BUDGET FIGURES

Budgets established for Capital Funds, Reserves and Reserve Funds are based on a project oriented basis, the costs of which may be carried out over one or more years. Although they are not directly comparable with current year actual amounts, they have been reflected on the Consolidated Statement of Operations.

TRUST FUND
NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
31 DECEMBER 1990

1. SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Basis of Accounting

Capital receipts and income are reported on the cash basis of accounting.

Expenditures are reported on the cash basis of accounting with the exception of administrative expenses which are reported on the accrual basis of accounting, which recognizes expenditures as they are incurred and measurable as a result of the receipt of goods or services and the creation of a legal obligation to pay.

2. ONTARIO HOME RENEWAL PROGRAM

The Ontario Home Renewal Program was established by the Ontario Ministry of Housing in 1973 to provide grants for municipalities to make loans to assist owner occupants to repair, rehabilitate and improve their homes to local property standards. Individual loans are limited to $7,500 of which the maximum forgivable portion is $4,000.

Ontario Home Renewal Program loans receivable at 31 December 1990 comprise repayable loans of $301 (1989 - $1,421) and forgivable loans of $NIL (1989 - $NIL). Loan forgiveness is earned and recorded at a rate of up to $600 per year of continued ownership and occupancy. In the event of the sale or lease of the home or in the event of the homeowner ceasing to occupy the home, the balances of the repayable loan and the unearned forgivable loan immediately become due and payable by the homeowner.

11) Non-Consolidated Entities

There are no local boards, joint local boards, municipal enterprises or utilities not consolidated.

111) Accounting for County and School Board Transactions

The taxation, other revenues, expenditures, assets and liabilities with respect to the operations of the school boards, and the County of Haliburton are not reflected in the municipal fund balances of these financial statements. Overlevies (underlevies) are reported on the "Consolidated Balance Sheet" as "other current liabilities" ("other current assets").

iv) Trust funds and their related operations administered by the municipality are not consolidated, but are reported separately on the "Trust Funds Statement of Continuity and Balance Sheet".

b) Basis of Accounting

i) Sources of financing and expenditures are reported on the accrual basis of accounting with the exception of principal and interest charges on long term liabilities which are charged against operations in the periods in which they are paid.

ii) The accrual basis of accounting recognizes revenues as they become available and measurable; expenditures are recognized as they are incurred and measurable as a result of receipt of goods or services and the creation of a legal obligation to pay.

111) Fixed Assets

The historical cost and accumulated depreciation for fixed assets are not recorded for municipal purposes. Fixed assets are reported as an expenditure on the Consolidated Statement of Operations in the year of acquisition.

iv) Capital Outlay to be Recovered in Future Years

"Capital outlay to be recovered in future years," which represents the outstanding principal portion of unmatured long term liabilities for municipal expenditures or capital funds transferred to other organizations, is reported on the "Consolidated Balance Sheet."

2. OPERATIONS OF SCHOOL BOARDS AND THE COUNTY OF HALIBURTON

Further to note 1 (a) (iii), the taxation, other revenues, expenditures and overlevies (underlevies) of the school boards and the County of Haliburton are comprised of the following:

	School Boards	County
Taxation and user charges	$810,283	$205,930
Requisitions	810,283	205,930
Overlevies (underlevies) for the year	-	-
Overlevies (underlevies) at beginning of year	-	-
Overlevies (underlevies) at end of year	$ -	$ -

3. TRUST FUNDS

Trust funds administered by the municipality amounting to $301 (1989 - $1,997) have not been included in the "Consolidated Balance Sheet", nor have their operations been included in the "Consolidated Statement of Operations."

4. MUNICIPAL FUND BALANCES AT THE END OF THE YEAR

The balances on the "Consolidated Statement of Operations" of municipal equity (or deficit) at the end of the year is comprised of the following:

	1990	1989
- for general reduction (increase) of taxation	$36,804	($ 1,819)

5. RESERVES AND RESERVE FUNDS

The total balances of reserves and reserve funds of $260,113 (1989 - $281,493) and $26,045 (1989 - $9,189) respectively are made up of the following:

	1990	1989
Reserves set aside for specific purposes by Council:
- for acquisition of fixed assets	$ 31,297	$ 56,677
- for recreation programs and facilities	21,235	21,235
- for working capital	80,000	80,000
- for fire departments	26,742	26,742
- for waste disposal site	56,360	56,360
- for road improvements	44,479	40,479

SUMMER'S HERE — and so are the fish!!

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

THE TROUT in Haliburton County's lakes this summer should be in plentiful supply once the Ministry of Natural Resources completes its annual "trout stocking" project in the next few weeks.

"Stocking takes place after the ice melts on the lakes and before the surface of the water warms up," says John Almond, an MNR fish and wildlife technician.

Trout are a cold-water species, living at depths where the temperature ranges from 10 to 17 degrees Celsius. "The water in the lakes is basically the same throughout this time of year, so there's not much difference in temperature from the hatchery and the lakes we dump them into."

The hatcheries which supply the Minden region (covering Haliburton, Victoria and Peterborough areas) are located at Skelton Lake near Bracebridge and in North Bay. Hatchery trucks with insulated tanks supplied with oxygen deliver thousands of splake, brook trout and rainbow trout to lakes throughout the region every Spring.

Where lakes are inaccessible by road, an MNR helicopter with specialized tanks drops fish from about two feet off the water. A drain feeding into a common chute is unplugged, releasing up to a thousand fish at a time.

Last Tuesday, a helicopter took off from a field in Carnarvon on a mission to drop 11,800 splake into six lakes in Haliburton County. The previous day 8,000 lake trout, 29,000 brook trout, 16,000 splake and 400 rainbow trout were stocked in lakes around the Haliburton Forest.

In total, 49,000 splake will be stocked in 18 lakes, 45,000 brook trout will be dropped in 14 lakes and 5 rivers, and 8,500 rainbow trout will

Local foresters fight a bad rap

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

"FOREST MANAGEMENT" is a term that is likely to become as familiar and perhaps as controversial in Canada as the G.S.T. or national sovereignty.

It is by no means a new term, but a process that has been evolving for decades as society comes to terms with a growing need to balance the interests of the lumber industry with those of recreation and the environment.

This was the basis for "Forest Management Day" at Haliburton Forest last Saturday. Representatives from the Haliburton Forest Owners Association, the Kennis Lake Cottagers' Association, logging companies, the Ministry of Natural Resources and local cottagers were on hand to talk openly and honestly about ways of preserving our forests for future generations.

"The forest industry as a whole is getting bad press," said Peter Schleifenbaum, manager of Haliburton Forest. "What we're doing here is not the clearcutting that's happening in Northern Ontario and British Columbia."

It's time to ask why those who are mismanaging forests are tainting the reputation of the entire forestry industry, he told the group.

Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve is

MNR's Peter Hynard leads the tour

"What we're doing here is not the clear-cutting in Northern Ontario and British Columbia": manager

50,000 acres of privately-owned land surrounding 50 lakes. Camping, hiking, fishing, hunting, trail-biking, skiing and snowmobiling are all offered for recreationalists. Logging is going on in the Forest, but it is all strictly planned and supervised by professional foresters.

The Haliburton Forest Association has worked in co-operation with the MNR since the late 1970s toward the common goal of resource management and conservation. Of the Forest's 50,000 acres, 15,000 acres of the timber resources are managed under the MNR and the other 35,000 are managed by the Association itself.

Schleifenbaum hires professional foresters, just as the Ministry does, to oversee areas where trees can be extracted with the least amount of risk to wildlife in the area, and where the potential for regeneration of healthy trees is at a maximum. Often, removing trees from a designated area will allow for greater growth potential for those which remain, something the public is not always aware of.

What the public has been witness to is the mismanagement of the forests over the past hundred years, says Schleifenbaum. High-grading, or the practice of cutting down only the best timber in a forest and leaving the diseased or genetically inferior trees to stand, went virtually unopposed from the late 1800s until the 1950s.

It was recognized then, as it is today, that the preservation of the forests is vital to our environmental wellbeing, while at the same time the timber industry plays an important role in the economic wellbeing of the province. Seven per cent of Ontario's exports to the U.S. come from the forest sector and more than 70,000 jobs are tied into forestry in this province.

"It's a shame but it seems you never see the issue down the middle," says Peter Hynard, a MNR forester who works closely with Haliburton Forest. "There is either an outcry from the public with demands to stop the logging and save the forests. Then the industry replies that they need the wood for their jobs. And the government replies by saving a token area, and neither side is happy in the end."

This is where the Haliburton Forest is unique.

PEOPLE

Group struggles to keep old hatchery

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

The last of the fish raised at the hatchery at Skeleton Lake went out this week, but local citizens have stepped in to ensure the hatchery remains public property for generations to come.

At a public meeting last week, the Ministry of Natural Resources told more than 150 local residents that the 53-year-old hatchery was outdated and could no longer produce quality fish. But the majority at the meeting felt the hatchery, from which Haliburton lakes are stocked, should stay open.

Aubrey Goltz, chairman of the citizens' group, says the hatchery must remain in MNR hands and function not only as a fish producing operation, but as an educational site for children and a recreation site for visitors.

"It will cost them more money to moth ball it than it will to keep it open," said Goltz in a telephone interview. "Biologists have been cross-breeding fish for so long the fish don't know whether to swim up or downstream."

"The hatchery was designed for fish culture in the 1930s," says Greg Deyne, an MNR fish and wildlife technician. Water for the hatchery is taken from the surface of Skeleton Lake, which the Ministry has found to be too cold in winter and too hot in the summer. The hatchery is really just a holding facility for trout from October to May, says Deyne.

"There are even more limitations when the earth and ponds freeze in winter because we can't disinfect the pond," says Deyne. "We've had thousands of fish die from disease at Skeleton Lake over the last five years, and we can't seem to put our finger on it."

Since 1984 the MNR has spent $25-million on three new fish culture stations in Pembroke, North Bay and Parry Sound, doubling the fish production as a result, says Deyne. All the new stations use ground water that remains at a constant temperature throughout the year and have no fish in them, which lowers the risk of disease. They also have "indoor raceways" which reduces the stress on fish because there's less handling.

"The new facilities let us take advantage of new technology," says Deyne. "They are also cost effective and produce a healthier product."

"The community has worked very hard to overcome the constraints of the Skeleton Lake hatchery and we understand that it is part of their heritage, and it's hard to maintain focus on its future use."

But the citizens' group is just beginning their fight to keep the hatchery open. They have written to Premier Bob Rae and have asked local MPP Daniel Waters to lobby for them at Queen's Park. So far they feel they have received no support from the government. Goltz says representatives arrived at the public meeting last week poorly prepared, with no alternatives and no ability to make decisions.

"Saving the hatchery and the park around it is for the children," says Goltz. "Our children will never have the opportunity to own land here, and will never have access to the lake."

Haliburton Forest visitors had a tour of logging's present and past

Loggers avoid haphazard cutting

It is a test in compromise, as it takes into account both public (as represented by the Ministry) and private (loggers and the Haliburton Forest Owners Association) concerns.

Hynard led the group on Saturday into the woods to explain how and why certain trees and sections of trees (referred to as "stands") are carefully chosen for removal — again, always trying to maintain a healthy balance between economic and ecological concerns.

The "tree grading system" begins with the forester determining the quality of trees in a particular stand, the potential for improvement of the stand, and the effect any action will have on the wildlife in the area.

The first trees designated for removal are the mature, quality trees that are expected to decline. They are in competition with younger trees that need more light and more room if they are to mature. Trees that have been damaged or diseased are often targeted for removal to allow younger trees to develop in a healthy environment.

"Trees have health problems just as people do," says Hynard. "Trees fall on other trees creating a wound which is vulnerable to insect and fungi attack." Some diseased, damaged or weak trees, which don't pose an immediate threat to the trees or wildlife around them, are often left standing, as they may drop seeds which will increase growth in the forest.

One of the results of this "selective management" process is that areas in Haliburton Forest will have stands that are two different ages. This means that one won't see the haphazard clearcutting that has received so much media attention.

But a well-cut stand is not apparent to the lay observer at first glance, says Hynard. "It can still be a shock when cutting is done properly because it's being done taking nature into consideration, not how it looks to people."

"We want to stop cottagers from believing when they see the log truck go out that the beauty of the land is going with it," Hynard says.

Even loggers are getting involved in the forest management process, recognizing the importance of conserving now for there to business in the future. "If our grandchildren want to get into this business, we've got to start thinking about that now," says Pat Morrison, a logger who has worked in the Haliburton Forest area for 19 years.

Those at Haliburton Forest are optimistic. "Changes are very slow, but if the pressure is kept on we can achieve fantastic forests in the future," says Dan Buhl, president of the Haliburton Forest Owners Association.

Anglers help pay for stocking lakes

make their way into 10 lakes and two rivers.

The cost of stocking is covered both by the $11.50 yearly fee anglers must pay for a fishing license and by the MNR fisheries division.

"It's not just a matter of putting fish in the lakes for anglers to catch," says Almond. "We also put fish in lakes to relieve pressure on existing stock so they will have a better chance at reproducing."

"The stocking of lakes is based on the physical and chemical characteristics of each lake," he says. "You only want to put in as many fish as the habitat will support."

And stocking is not the answer for all lakes, just as some lakes aren't suitable for certain fish, says

Almond. The quality of lakes are tested and monitored each year, and post-stocking assessments are done every two years.

Fish are marked by clipping different fins each stocking season so the Ministry is able to monitor their progress over several years. And angler surveys are another important way for the Ministry to estimate how much of the trout harvest is being removed.

"Every year we (at the district level) put in a request to the provincial fishery system based on a five-year forecast of how many fish we will need for stocking," says Almond. "And this enables the hatchery system to meet our targets more easily."

ONE PEST TO GO

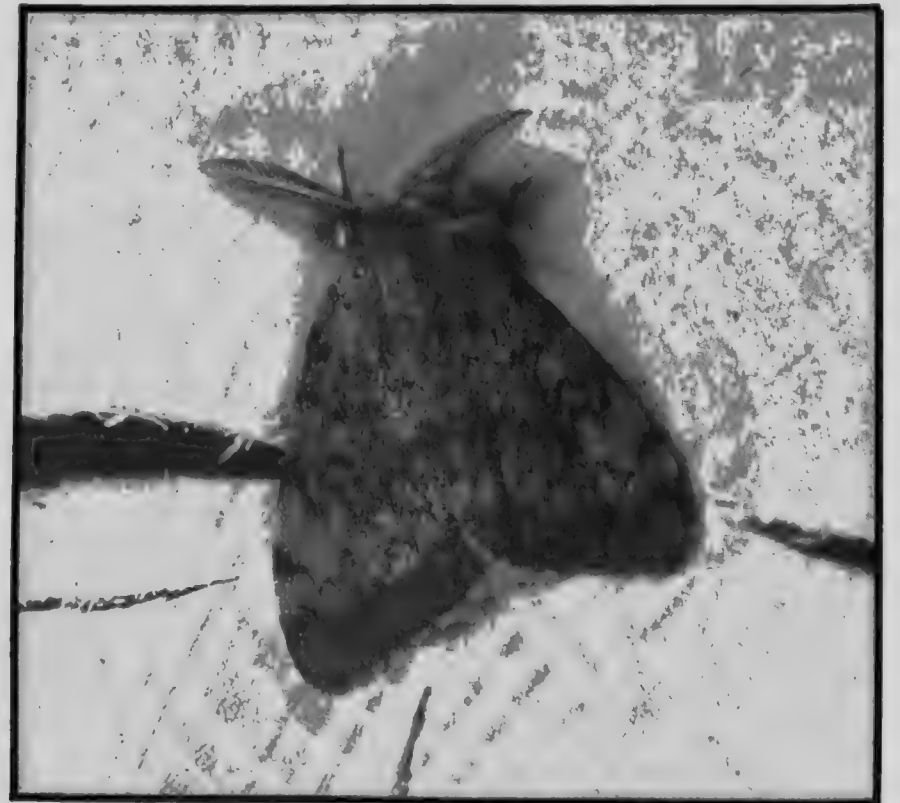

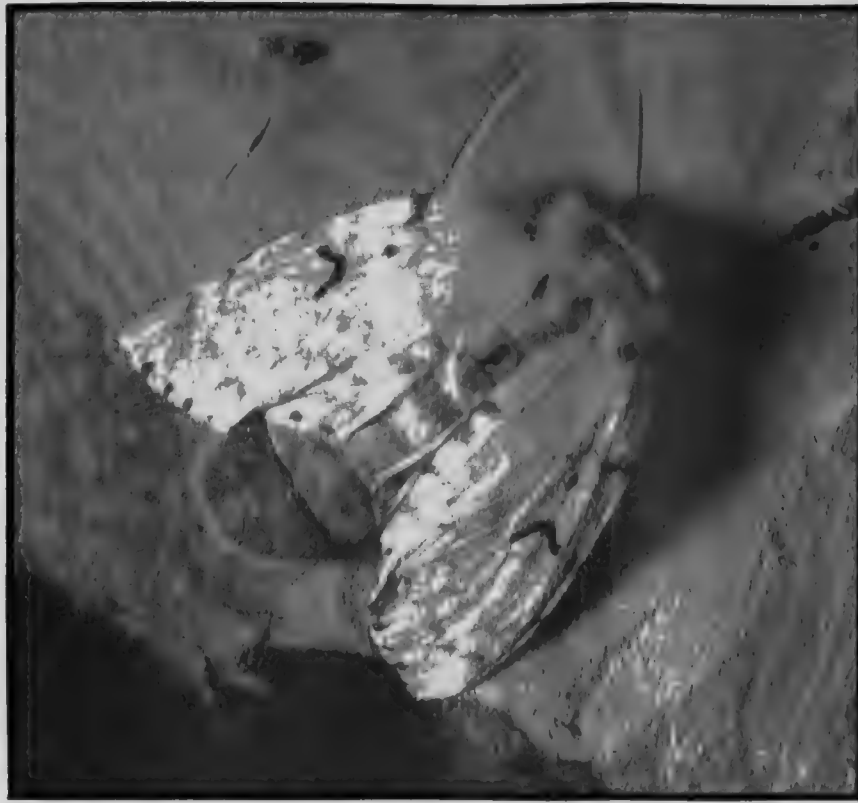

Helicopters come to the aid of forests attacked by Gypsy moth

by LEONARD MUNT
Gypsy Moth Co-ordinator

IT'S THAT TIME OF THE YEAR AGAIN, when insects such as the Gypsy moth leave their over-wintering stage and proceed to make their mark on the forests in and around Haliburton County.

We are about to begin our 1991 Gypsy moth control program. The program will be handled by two Bell 206 Jet Ranger helicopters. You may have already seen one of them hovering above your home or cottage. They are flying reconnaissance to familiarize the navigator with the mapped spray blocks.

This week you will see both helicopters, one being the navigation aircraft and the other being the spray aircraft. The sound of the aircraft will probably make you curious and you will want to

The county and the Ministry of Natural Resources want to kill the Gypsy moths before they reach the adult stage, above. Areas in Lutterworth, Snowdon, Glamorgan, Anson and Minden Townships will be sprayed with Bt by helicopter in the upcoming weeks go outside to see what is going on. Please STAY inside when you hear the aircraft overhead. If the pilot of either aircraft sees you outside he will turn the spray apparatus off and you might not receive the application. This is a policy set out by the Ministry of Natural Resources. So please stay inside when you hear the aircraft.

The helipad this year will be just north of Moore Falls and will be the site of the loading of the Bt into the aircraft. This is another spot which will attract attention and possibly some on-lookers. If you see the helicopters and get a notion to go and have a look, please don't! The men working at this site will be very busy and will be working around some very dangerous equipment (i.e. helicopters). Any distraction from onlookers could create a problem. So please stay away from this site.

I would like at this time to reaffirm the effectiveness and safety of Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt). This insecticide is a biological insecticide produced naturally in the environment and found in the soil. Bt has been shown to only affect the larval (caterpillar) form of Lepidopteran insects. (Lepidopteran insects turn into a moth or butterfly.) It does not affect mammals, birds, or other insects. If you have a garden and the spray lands on it, just wash your vegetables the same way you would normally. If you have any concerns about this specific topic I would be more than happy to send literature on the subject to you.

The areas included in this year's program are: Lutterworth, Snowdon, Glamorgan, Anson and Minden Townships. These areas have been checked and fall under the MNR's conditions: the area must have 1250 egg masses per hectare (500 egg masses/acre) and there must be a continuous spray block of not less than 10 acres. If either one of these criteria were not met, a letter was sent to the applicant explaining the problem. Money was also returned along with literature which gives other alternatives in controlling the insect on a much smaller scale.

I will keep the public posted on the program for next year. The Forest Health Management Committee, chaired by Bill Davis and the MNR, is deciding what form the program will take next year. For the rest of the summer I will be available to attend property owners' meetings to discuss the Gypsy moth program or forest health issues facing the County. In the fall I will be conducting egg mass surveys to determine how the Bt worked this year and assessing the situation for next year's program.

If you have any questions about the program, please don't hesitate to give me a call at 705-286-1333, or write to: Leonard Munt, Forest Health Coordinator, Box 399, Minden, Ontario, K0M 2K0.

Students survive SAC elections

Melissa Grozelle, Julie-Anne Adam

Colin Sisson emerges as the new president

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

LAST MONDAY the whole school gathered in the gym to listen to SAC election speeches. While we listened carefully to every joke and promise each candidate made, students carefully contemplated how they would vote. Some people who were indecisive about their choice easily made up their mind when they heard a candidate's speech. What causes students to vote the way they do? Is it a question of who the best person is for the job? Or more a matter of Inner school politics? We have our new SAC for next year. Colin Sisson is president. I wonder if his idea that if we sell a few more chocolate bars next year we may be able to get that dome over the football field helped him to win a few more votes? For vice-president it was finally decided that Doug Craigmyle would be the winner. Chris Greenfield is our new social convener. Our new secretary is Jeannette Verhovany. Vicky Bech was acclaimed treasurer, and Saskia Smith was acclaimed promotional representative. The combination of all these imaginative people will, we hope, make a successful student council.

On Tuesday, after all the ballots had been counted, the candidates all met in one room to be told the results. It was a very tense situation because all candidates had either gone through school together or were friends. When the winners were announced not a person said a word, not even the winners. There was a sense of sadness for even the winners that they had won instead of their friends. All the candidates tried very hard with their campaigns. Posters, stickers, slogans, and speeches were all done very well. Any of the candidates would have done a good job. Congratulations to the new SAC!

It is getting very warm outside and inside the classroom as well. Complaints and protests on school rules of not being able to wear shorts can be heard in almost every classroom. Students feel the difficulty to concentrate when perspiration drips onto their homework. There is an alternate choice. Students as well as teachers had the opportunity to purchase school shorts. This is sometimes difficult for students who can't afford to pay 20 dollars for a pair of shorts or do not have the money the particular week the student council is selling school shorts. Maybe, in the future the rule will be changed.

Pollution Probe helps with the housekeeping in a friendly way

INFORMATION NEWS

by: DOREEN HAWMAN

Most of us have become aware of the dangers — to the environment and to our own health — of using commercial household cleaners that are loaded with toxic chemicals.

Here are a few recipes for alternative cleaners to make your spring clean-up safer. These recipes have been suggested by Pollution Probe, a non profit organization dedicated to preserving the environment.

ALL-PURPOSE CLEANER: Mix one half cup ammonia, one half cup white vinegar, one quarter cup baking soda, one half gallon water.

SCOURING POWER: Combine baking soda and water into a paste. Rub this into the surface you're cleaning, let sit for one half hour, then sponge it off.

CHROME APPLIANCES: Clean chrome by polishing with a soft cloth and rubbing alcohol, or with a little ammonia and hot water. Dry baking soda and a dry cloth can also do the job.

SILVERWARE: Combine 1 quart water, 1 tablespoon baking soda and 1 tablespoon salt.

A WORD OF CAUTION: While you can make a safe and effective preparations based on these substances, remember to take special care when using ammonia. Since ammonia can irritate the skin and eyes, use it in a well-ventilated area and wear gloves. Never mix it with chlorine bleach, as the mixture produces poisonous chloramine fumes.

Vinegar and certain commercial toilet bowl cleaners also produce a deadly gas when mixed with chlorine bleach.

If you require an application or need help completing a form, contact the Haliburton County Information Centre for assistance.

PARA-MED HEALTH SERVICES has an immediate opening for Reg. Nurses in Victoria and Haliburton County

Teens are keeping busy

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

The Sunday Supper Club met last on May 5 at the Centre with 33 present. Harold Andrews presented a bouquet of flowers to one of the ladies in acknowledgement and honour of Mother's Day. Nancy Brink showed floral slides of Holland and an enjoyable meal was served by the West Guilford Baptist Church ladies and enjoyed by all present.

From May 6 to 10 inclusive, Sara Lilius, Dan and Laura Chumbley, through the Highschool enrichment programme at Grade 1 level, attended Queen's University. Each received an overview version of a course which interested them. Sara's was nursing, Dan's was engineering, and Laura's theatre directing, acting, producing. All were enthusiastic about the week's work and the experience generally.

Did you know there is a Soda Club? It's for teenagers on Friday evenings at the Stanhope Firehall Centre, from 8-11 p.m. It involves more than consuming large sodas and is supervised by interested and involved adults of the area including Thelma McGuire and Rona Mavor.

Occasionally I hear of people who have just moved into the area who wonder how on earth to fill their time. If I may make a suggestion: Concert Series meets once a month. The commitment is minimal. Rails' End is another place which is pleasant in itself. If you are at all community minded or musically inclined this organization gives great satisfaction for a short monthly time of volunteering at the hour-long meeting. If this appeals, please join us at Rails' End on May 21 at 4 p.m., or phone me at 754-2278 for information. The first concert (Nov. 17) at the Legion in Haliburton is Rob Beattie in Dan Needles' Letter from Wingfield Farm, an hilarious version of how the country looks to a person newly planted in rural Ontario from city life.

The small but enthusiastic Clog Dancers group continue at the Guilford Centre every Wednesday night for practice. They welcome an audience — free! It is always more fun to perform when you get a reaction, so please feel free to drop in during the evening and see the group developing this talent under the direction of John Dickinson.

May 31 at the Centre is the setting for a Talent Night provided by the local community to raise funds for Anglican Churches here, and sponsored by the B.A.C. Brotherhood of Anglican Churchmen.

Barb and Doug Elliot have just had the pleasure of a visit from Doug's parents, Helen and Bob Elliot of Cambridge, Ontario.

Trip is a nice treat

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Sunday night chapel service was taken by Rev. John Burgess with organist Alice Jones on the organ. We enjoyed the service very much.

Monday was a very busy day with fitness, bible study, by Evelyn Coleman, arts and crafts, reading by Marion Fisher and movies shown by Ena Marion and Ruth Rice. We sincerely thank each one.

Tuesday morning chapel service was by Father Felix Megallanes. The residents thank him.

In the afternoon Doris took some of the residents for a bus ride. We were very happy to have Doris back after her surgery. We thank Doris for taking us. Thanks to the drivers who drove while Doris was away. We went to Haliburton to the doughnut shop for our treat. Glenda gave the doughnuts to all of us. We thank her very much for their generosity. We came home by West Guilford, North Shore Road of Green, Maple, Beech Lakes and Highway 35.

Wednesday afternoon we held Residents Council. There was a good attendance and having Doris back and Rheta Jones, Administrator also able to attend made TUNING UP: Senior students at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden rehearse for this Thursday's Talent Night at the school (7:30 p.m.) It was so hot out, the band decided to practice outside under the trees, under the direction of teacher Nick Pawluch. Talent night is the showcase of their year's efforts.

A few residents ailing

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

I'm sorry I couldn't find anyone to fill in for me the past couple of weeks while we were away in Brockville visiting with our daughter Laurie and family.

Get well wishes to Ruth Samarillo who is in Lindsay Hospital recovering from surgery.

Jim and Edna Williamson of St. Catharines spent a few days with their daughter, Mary Bell and family.

We were sorry to learn of the death of Aaron Siirala and extend the sympathies of the village to his family.

Welcome to Dan and Marilyn Mills, the new lessees of the Petro-Canada Service Centre at the corner of Hwys. 35 and 118. We wish them luck in their venture.

Our thoughts and prayers are with Harvey Barnhart who suffered a broken neck when struck by a bale of hay. He was sent home from hospital wearing a cage and head brace but has had to return there.

Municipality of Monmouth 1990 Financial Statement

To the Members of Council, Inhabitants and Ratepayers of the Corporation of the Township of Monmouth

We have audited the consolidated balance sheet of the Corporation of the Township of Monmouth as at December 31, 1990 and the consolidated statement of operations for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Township's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform an audit to obtain reasonable assurance whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation.

In our opinion, these consolidated financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Corporation of the Township of Monmouth as at December 31, 1990 and the results of its operations for the year then ended in accordance with the accounting principles disclosed in note 1 to the financial statements.

THE COWS COME OUT TO PLAY: Michelle White, Valerie Sutcliffe and Justin Bonin find a friend in a cow brought to their playground at Wee Care by Carmen Lee of Essonville. The calf even enjoyed the special attention.

Fisherman spots missing monsters

Guelph storyteller and monster hunter John Batt says "An excited cottager called me last Friday saying he had seen the two mini monsters leave Esson Lake at the north end. He was very excited and said he had watched from his boat early in the morning as the two came out of the water and started to climb the hill at the northern most tip of Esson Lake. The cottager asked to remain anonymous but requested free passes to the Haliburton Highland Games."

"I began to make preparations," Batt added, to get up there as quickly as I could when I received another call from a local fisherman. He had been fishing early on Sunday at Miskwabi Lake when he saw two 'large seal-like creatures' come down from the forest and slip into the lake. The fisherman is a local entrepreneur who will have a concession at the Highland Games on June 22nd.

This story got the monster hunter and storyteller into the action mode and Batt immediately called David McLeish, the District Biologist with the Ministry of Natural Resources in Minden. "David and I discussed the matter and David said it was possible that the two mini monsters had depleted their food source in Esson Lake and were forced to migrate to another large body of water. Other species of wildlife conform to this behavior. David agreed to be on hand at the Games."

Batt has been hired by the Haliburton Highland Games Marketing Committee to recapture the monsters for the Haliburton Highland games on June 22nd. He said "Now that I know where the monsters left Esson Lake it will be easier for me to recapture them."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Outpost plans are moving ahead

'No booze, no smoke and food that is grown in the soil, not out of a packet,' is May Croft's prescription for a long life. She should know - last Thursday the Monmouth Senior Citizens Club helped her celebrate her 102 birthday with a lunch and cake.

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

Remember that last big snow storm that brought blowing winds and high drifts? That evening a meeting was held in the Lloyd Watson Centre to talk about doing something to preserve the Wilberforce Red Cross Outpost building. Despite the storm many courageous souls came out to show their interest in the idea. A committee set up that evening now has a name. It is the Wilberforce Heritage Guild 1991. Members have attended meetings with Monmouth Council, have looked into the steps necessary to form and maintain the organization and now are ready to report on progress made. All of this is to be discussed at the next public meeting that takes place in the Lloyd Watson Centre on June 4 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited to come out and talk over our future plans.

At our last meeting at the Village we were happy to have a visit from Doreen Hutchinson of Vineland, Doreen, with fond memories of the local Outpost, presented some interesting details about setting up and caring for museums, preserving antique articles and what to do to keep old documents in good condition.

One evening this week our Post Office was robbed. This is seen as a crime against all of our citizens. The Post Office in this small centre is like part of our home. We visit there daily, post our precious correspondence and with a turn of a key, receive our letters, our cheques, our bills. We have had the same trustworthy Postmaster for years and look on him as a friend or a relative. It is here that we greet our friends and neighbours. That anyone would disturb this normal way of life is an outrage. We are all anxious to see the thieves brought to justice.

A handsome booklet with gold print on a dark green background arrived with the Toronto Star this week. Published by the Ontario Government through the Ontario Ministry of Tourism and Recreation, it directs readers to the best spots for summer vacations in this Province. It contains many colourful illustrations, gives information about dates and location of special events taking place. Nowhere does it mention Haliburton and all that it has to offer. We all know that Haliburton is the finest recreation centre of them all.

Mrs. May Croft, a Wilberforce celebrity, will greet friends at her home on Friday, May 17. That day marks her 102nd birthday. To honour that event her many friends at the Senior Citizen Club prepared a roast beef dinner with all the trimmings.

This occurred at the Lloyd Watson Centre on Thursday afternoon and Mrs. Croft enjoyed every minute of it. She looked charming in a pretty printed dress and said that it was the happiest time she had enjoyed for many a day. Family members have arrived for the occasion and in her home are cards and lovely flowers to decorate her living room.

Mrs. Croft maintains her sharp intelligence and looks as though she could go on forever. The five year diary that she received for her 95th birthday has long been filled and she is well into the next book.

More Senior League...

the meeting more interesting.

The sympathy of the Residents and Staff of Hyland Crest goes out to the relatives and friends of Billie Moore (to us) who passed away Wednesday, May 8, 1991.

Thursday, the tea party was provided and served by Minden Horticultural Society. Jean Robson, Irene Fuhr, Peggy Harrington, Muriel Green. It was a delicious tea. We were entertained by the Kirkfield Junior Choir led and trained by Lois McBrien.

A sewing circle is being formed at the Highland Crest Senior's Home. Willing hands are needed who can quilt, sew or crochet. One day per week to meet with friends and residents for a social get together and to exchange new ideas in the line of crafts. Please contact Mary Guillemain at 286-5168

HALIBURTON COUNTY HOME SUPPORT SERVICES

The Board of Directors wishes to advise all members and interested persons that it adopted on May 16, 1991, new general operating by-laws for Haliburton County Home Support Services. The new proposed general operating by-laws will be presented to the annual meeting of members for adoption. If the new by-laws are so adopted, a further motion will be made at the annual meeting on May 31st, 1991, that the annual meeting be adjourned until Sept. 13, 1991, for the purpose only of electing new directors. The above procedure is required in order to afford sufficient times for additional persons to qualify as members of Haliburton County Home Support Services so that a potentially expanded membership will be able to participate in the election of the new Board of Directors.
